Dead Since 1885
CHENEY, Neb. (AP) — Doctors told Louis Alfred Morton in 1885 he wouldn't last another year. Morton, a retired Lancaster county farmer, has just observed his 100th birthday, recalling how Indians roamed much of southeastern Nebraska when he came to the state from Illinois by covered wagon in 1882.

Professor Here Compiling Data On Mountain Folk

Dr. Joseph S. Hall, instructor in English at Pasadena College, California, is now at Haywood County compiling information for articles on mountain speech, folk lore, and folk songs.

Nearly ready for publication is a story on "Bear-Hunting Tales of the Smokies," related to Dr. Hall by Steve Woody, father of Jonathan H. Woody of Waynesville.

While in the county, Dr. Hall has been working with W. C. Medford, Haywood's chronicler of the good old days, in the Big Bend and Hurricane sections.

The Californian first came to Western North Carolina in 1937 as a historian with the Civilian Conservation Corps. He returned in 1939 and 1940 to work on a special historical project for Columbia University, carried out in cooperation with the National Park Service.

Dr. Hall said he plans to turn out his collection of documents, letters, recordings and other information on the Southern mountains to Columbia.

Skunk Cleans Up

DECATUR, Ill. (AP) — Ferdinand the Skunk is a deodorized booby prize for the department of a plant with the lowest cleanup record.
