Wives Of Federal Officials Must Be Patient, Versatile

By JANE EADS

WASHINGTON — Somebody should strike a medal for wives of public officials. Always ready for any change in plans or jobs, promotions or demotions, they must have patience, understanding and great versatility in order to bolster the big man's morale and keep the family healthy and happy.

Take the President's appointment of Garrison Norton as assistant secretary of the Navy for air. The Nortons and their two children, Glenavie, 11, and Charles Dyer, 9, had scheduled a trip abroad. Instead, they will go to Maine and later to a ranch in Wyoming. Like most wives of men in public life, Mrs. Norton took the change in plans philosophically. Only hitch is they had rented their house at North Haven, Me. for the summer.

As far as Washington is concerned, the Nortons will have few adjustments to make. They've lived here since 1946, when Norton took an important position with the State Department. Since 1949 he has been a consultant to the navy secretary.

Mrs. Fred A. Seaton, wife of the new secretary of the interior, has packed up all the family's belongings and their four children and gone to Hastings, Neb., to their farm for the summer. Come fall, she'll have to search for a new house here and adjust herself to the responsibilities of a full-fledged cabinet wife. Seaton first came here to fill out the unexpired term of the late Sen. Kenneth S. Wherry, later served as assistant secretary of defense.

Then there's Mrs. Harry P. Cain. Her husband, former Republican senator from Washington state, is somewhat doubtful that he'll be reappointed to the Subversive Activities Control Board in view of his blistering attacks on the Eisenhower administration's employe security program. His current term expires in August.

Mrs. Cain is ready for any contingency. They've rented their big handsome home and moved into a one-bedroom apartment. Mrs. Cain has taken a job in a local decorating shop as well as getting a license to sell real estate. They plan to sell their property in Tacoma, Wash.

Capital Mental Hospital Is Monument To Teacher

By JANE EADS

WASHINGTON — The Dorothea Lynde Dix Pavilion, new six million dollar adjunct to the government's St. Elizabeth's Hospital here, is a memorial to a former Boston school teacher who dedicated most of her life to improving the lot of the mentally ill.

The modern, 10-story structure, which will operate as a receiving and intensive treatment center with therapeutic and rehabilitative facilities and personnel, was described by welfare secretary Marion B. Folsom as a "symbol of progress in the psychiatric world, providing for a major advancement in the care and treatment of the mentally ill, in which St. Elizabeth's has been the leader since its beginnings in 1855."

St. Elizabeth's Hospital, originally known as the Government Hospital for the Insane, had its beginning in an appropriation of $100,000 passed by Congress in 1852 for the purchase of a site and the construction of a building. This beginning was largely through the efforts of Dorothea Lynde Dix who had become interested in the mentally ill when forced to retire at the age of 39 because of illness. She volunteered to teach Sunday school to the inmates of the East Cambridge, Mass., jail, which housed insane persons. From that time on, until her death in 1887 at the age of 85, she worked continuously to improve the lot of the mentally ill. She also found time to administer to the needs of other afflicted people, notably the deaf, dumb and blind.

She is credited with having brought about the establishment

Low Calorie Desserts Can Be Delicious

Are you a weight watcher who watches with horror the calories that are piled on your plate at meal time? Most calorie-counting people shake their heads sadly when offered dessert at mealtime and say, "They're too fattening."

According to Extension Nutritionist S. Virginia Wilson, this needn't be the story. There are low calorie desserts that are, believe it or not, good to eat.

One way to have low calorie desserts is to use evaporated or non-fat dry milk for whipped toppings instead of whipped cream. Miss Wilson suggests Lemon Chiffon Pie for a dessert high in food value, yet low in calories.

LEMON CHIFFON PIE

- 1 1/2 teaspoons gelatin
1/4 cup cold water
1/2 cup sugar
1/3 cup lemon juice
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 egg slightly beaten
1 teaspoon lemon rind
1/4 cup dry milk
1/3 cup cold water

Sprinkle gelatin on cold water and let soak for five minutes. Combine sugar, lemon juice, salt and egg in double boiler, stirring constantly until slightly thickened, about ten minutes. Add softened gelatin and lemon rind and stir until gelatin is dissolved. Chill until of jelly like consistency, then beat until fluffy. Add nonfat dry milk solids to 1/3 cup ice cold water and beat until it is stiff enough to hold in peaks. Combine the two mixtures and turn into baked pie shell. Chill until firm. Makes one 8-inch pie.

For even fewer calories, Miss Wilson suggests leaving off the pie crust and serving the filling as "Lemon Sponge".

drive went out of bounds and his second drive fell short, the vice president quipped to Dr. Graham: "You must have been praying that I'd miss."

After the foursome left the first tee, Secret Service agents and law-enforcement officers stopped the crowd and kept them from following the golfers about the course.

Before leaving Lake Logan this morning for the golf course, the vice president and his party got in a bit of fishing. Apparently, they did fairly well and made several catches.

Less than two hours before the car bearing the vice president passed the same spot, the Lake Logan road near the Riverside Church was the scene of a bad accident in which one teen-aged boy was injured critically.

The population has increased so rapidly in America that there are now about seven times as many Americans as there were a century ago.

BISMARCK, N. D., (AP)—In this city, Policeman Eddie Hayes shot a squirrel that had undertaken to "remodel" an elm tree and littered a yard with gnawed-off limbs. Other officers rounded up cattle that were gallivanting over lawns in another part of town. Their owner said someone cut a fence. And a man and his wife were charged with throwing stones in a neighborhood fuss.

Advertising... keeps prices down

A penny a pound on the price of a pork roast can make a world of difference to a grocery shopper. And food store managers know it! That's why they do everything possible to keep prices low in their advertising. It's the same for almost any product you can think of. No store can sell it for ten dollars while a second store is advertising it for five.

Advertising enables you to sit back, relax and compare prices and merchandise. Shopping trips can be planned beforehand to take advantage of the sales which merchants are advertising constantly. By providing a giant market place where stores of all kinds can compete for your business, the advertising in this newspaper helps keep prices low.
