The idea was conceived last year and tried first on a limited basis, with alumni invited to bring their families for the weekend. Bird said the response was so gratifying that it was thought feasible to proceed with plans for all who might be able to attend.

On Saturday evening a banquet will be held in the college dining hall, with a speaker and a musical program to be announced later. Following the banquet, an informal reception will take place in Reynolds parlors, at which time a guest musical artist will perform.
