WASH COLOR INTO FABRICS

Color plays an exciting role in modern living. From scarves to skillets to draperies and dustpans, color is here. Today you can tint or dye almost any type of textile or fabric. You can change the color of your dress, table linen or draperies almost as easily as you wash clothes, particularly if you have an automatic washing machine.

The quickest and easiest way to achieve or renew old color is through tinting. Tinting is usually reserved for the lighter colors—pinks, blues, greens, yellows, golden browns. Tinting tends to be a more temporary coloring process, for fabrics may lose their color after repeated laundering. Black, navy, dark brown, and red should be fast-dyed. The washing action of the washing machine assures an even spread of dye throughout the fabric. Also, it aids in the thorough penetration of the dye, giving greater depth of color and a more lasting quality to tinted articles. Tinting in the washer simplifies the handling of large pieces such as draperies, bedspreads, slip covers, and shag rugs. Then, too, a number of smaller articles can be tinted at one time.

Before tinting be sure that the material is washable and that it is clean. Make sure that you have an ample supply of hot water, the hotter, the better. Stains and spots should be removed before tinting. Wash the article and rinse thoroughly. Dissolve the proper amount of dye in a pan of hot water on the range. Heat to simmer but do not boil. Dissolve and strain through a clean cloth into another pan. Place the material or garment into washer and fill machine with hot water. Add the dissolved and strained dye solution. Start the washer immediately and set the dial to give you the longest possible time cycle. Rinse, using the normal rinsing cycle. Hang up material or place garment on a hanger until almost dry (but still slightly damp). Press on wrong side.

New Knits

By VERA WINSTON

THE knitted sheath is taking over for early fall and many of the smartest take on costume airs with their own jackets, or, smarter yet, their own "blouson" jacket. This one has a leather belt over which it is slightly bloused to show it is the latest. The jacket is elasticized at the bottom to fall at will and like the dress has rib knit detail. You can't go wrong choosing this one for casual town wear, and certainly for plenty of use in the suburbs or country.

New Bill Aids Towns To Finance Sewage Plants

By BILL WHITLEY

POLLUTION. Cities and towns of North Carolina stand the chance of getting a big boost in their efforts to reduce stream pollution through legislation enacted in the closing days of Congress.

The Water Pollution Control Act (P.L. 860) carries an authorization for the expenditure of 50 million dollars on sewage-treatment plants.

According to Sen. W. Kerr Scott, cities and towns will be able to get Federal grants for building sewage disposal facilities in about the same manner as local communities now receive Federal grants for construction of hospitals and health centers under the Hill-Burton Act.

30 PER CENT. The new law says that grants to municipalities will be limited to 30 per cent of the total plant costs. The rest must come from local or state funds.

"Many states," Scott said, "will undoubtedly want to appropriate funds for expenditure on a matching basis with the Federal program.

If this is done, then it will mean that many cities and towns will be able to do badly needed work in this field that is now prohibited because of high costs."

In the opinion of Scott, the new legislation "is by far the most far-reaching concrete step that has ever been taken in the field of stream pollution."

Scott said grants made to specific municipalities will have to be approved by health authorities in each state. In the case of North Carolina, this will probably mean the state health officer.

DETAILS. On the national level, the program will be administered by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, which is now working on administrative details with state officials throughout the Nation.

HEW officials informed Scott that procedures will be announced soon as to how cities and towns should go about making applications for grants.

News Group Is Named To Work With Methodists

A North Carolina editor, Holt McPherson of the High Point Enterprise, has been named chairman of the press relations advisory committee for the World Methodist Conference to be held Sept. 1-12.

His appointment was announced by Bishop Ivan Lee Holt of St. Louis, president of the World Methodist Council, and the Rev. Dr. Ralph Stoddy of New York, director of the Methodist Church's Public Relations Commission. Dr. Stoddy will be in charge of the press room.

McPherson is vice chairman of the Methodist Public Relations Commission, a nine-member body which oversees the work of the churchwide agency. He is a member of the American Council on Education for Journalism, past president of the North Carolina Press Association and state chairman of the Associated Press' Freedom of Information Committee.

McPherson has named seven other editors and publishers to the committee to assist in press arrangements for the international conference, expected to attract 2,500 delegates and visitors from 70 countries.

They are W. A. Bailey, editor of the Kansas City (Kans.) Kansas; Wayne W. Freeman, editor of the Greenville (S.C.) News-Piedmont, and these North Carolinians: Thomas L. Robinson, publisher of the Charlotte News; Josephus Daniels, Jr., president of the Raleigh News & Observer; W. Curtis Russ, editor of the Waynesville Mountaineer; Josh L. Horne, Jr., publisher of the Rocky Mount Telegram, and Ed M. Anderson, publisher of the Forest City Courier.

lina cities and towns have already expressed a deep interest in this new program," Scott said "because it will mean the difference between paper plans and actual construction in many, many cases."

Of the total $50 million set aside by Congress for construction grants for the Nation, tentative figures show that North Carolina cities and towns will be eligible to receive $1,270,675 in Federal funds.
