In Bank Theft

ROBERT DRODGE, 27, of Mount Morris, Pa., an unordained minister, is shown after his arrest at Waynesburg, Pa., charged with stealing $22,000 from an account in a Morgantown, W. Va. bank where he was employed as a teller. "I can't figure out what happened," said Drodge, who resigned his pastorate three years ago. "I didn't dissipate it. I gave some of it to needy people and I had to keep a car and the children needed many things."

Comings - Goings Along Fines Creek

By MRS. SAM FERGUSON

PARENT PROBLEMS

Keep The Family Happy On A Long Trip By Car

By GARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, Ph.D.

IT'S safest, easiest and pleasantest for the entire family traveling by car on a long journey when the daily distance does not exceed 250 miles. Then there's not the urge to speed and there's time for frequent stopping to visit places of interest or to walk about every few hours.

Tots get pretty tired traveling. So do older children and their parents. When tired, everyone becomes more irritable.

It's easy for the baby under a year of age, who can sleep in a basket or the like. For this child and older ones sterilized milk and water in thermos containers are desirable. The supply should be replenished at places on the way so that it is always fresh.

Wise parents stop with the family only at eating places known to be highly sanitary, even for quick lunches. For economy and good fun, the motoring family can eat one or two meals at a roadside picnic grill.

Tots and older children incline to consume too many soft drinks and other sweets. Wise parents specify ahead of time the frequency with which children may have them. A not too liberal allowance plan may take care of this.

tinker with the handles on the car doors, especially on a long trip. The back seat of a two-door sedan makes them safe on this score. Removing the inside handle of a car door can have merit, though in an emergency the door handle may be needed.

Of course, some parents have trained their tots early not to tamper with the car door handle and are so consistent and decisive in the matter as to avoid such hazards. It's easy when these tots have learned early the unambiguous meaning of No.

Tired Tots
 Then tired tots sitting together may fight and quarrel, distracting the driver. They won't with skillful and decisive parents.

A good pastime while riding, for children who are old enough, is to play games—looking for certain numbers and names of states on license plates, counting animals of various types in the fields, propounding riddles, telling jokes, singing familiar songs. Resourceful parents can participate and keep such amusements going for hours.

(My bulletin, "How To Teach Tot Meaning of No," may be had by sending a self-addressed, stamped envelope to me in care of this newspaper.)

Children from two to five may
