McCracken apartments, occupied by Mrs. Casper Thomas, who was ironing and had her back to the door at the time, Deputy Sheriff Gene Howell said that the fugitive grabbed Mrs. Thomas by the shoulders, but fled when she screamed.

Later Williams knocked on the door of an apartment at the Hahn apartments occupied by Mr. and Mrs. H. Johns. When Mrs. Johns came to the door and asked the escapee what he wanted, Williams started using obscene language, but fled when Mrs. Johns said: "Get away from here, I'm going to call the law."

Later, both Mrs. Johns and Mrs. Thomas identified Williams as the man who accosted them.

Deputy Howell said he first spotted the escaped prisoner crouched by a parked car near Clyde Green's restaurant, called to him to halt, and apprehended him on the highway in front of the rubber plant. He offered no resistance to the arrest, Howell added.

Mr. Rogers said this was the first time that Williams had made any trouble for prison officials since he was committed in 1943 on charges of breaking and entering and attempted rape.

The prison camp superintendent explained that state law makes it mandatory that he be tried for escaping from confinement, and the case probably will be heard at the next term of Haywood County Superior Court in November.

Mr. Rogers said that the escapee denied molesting the two women.

The late frost and freeze killed a large part of the Frady crop, but she plans to harvest 8,500 bushels, which is about a third of a normal crop.

This season she sprayed eight times, and says she feels that next year she will make it ten times, as she can see the results of good spraying. She has an underground system, which operates from the basement of a new three-story packing house.

Spraying this year ran to about $12,000, but she explained: "It was worth every bit of it in producing quality fruit."

There are some New Jersey fruit pickers here in Haywood helping to harvest the current crop.

Methodist dignitaries from overseas by 13 U. S. colleges and universities.

Presidents or representatives of the American institutes were present to bestow the degrees.

Four of those honored are titular heads of independent Methodist churches in Ireland, United Kingdom, Australia and New Zealand. Others are leading church laymen or clergymen.

Among the degrees was a Doctor of Divinity conferred by President F. Pendleton Gaines of Wofford College, Spartanburg, S. C., on the Rev. A. Edwards, Birmingham, England.

The delegates hailed science and the arts, once shunned as the Devil's domain, as offering Christians opportunities of "a kind undreamed of by previous generations."

In a 1,500-word message, the World Methodist Conference cited poetry, drama, the arts and scientific advances as strong adjuncts to religion.

In an unanimous action, delegates from 40 nations praised the "New expressions of faith in terms of poetry, drama, and the arts," and added: "Ever growing scientific knowledge not only displays with increasing fullness the splendor of God's creative energy but lays upon us a solemn obligation to see that it is used on the widest possible scale to build a satisfying and abundant life for all people of the earth."

Dr. Charles A. Coulson, noted mathematician and nuclear physicist of England's Oxford University, who introduced the section, said drama, poetry and science were "treated as if they belonged to the Devil" in the past. "I'm sure the Devil chuckled over that," he added. "All good art is in some way telling us something about God, and the true good, honest practice of science is in a sense a religious activity. We are saying to the scientist to come on in and help us, that he is doing his part of the work in building the kingdom of God."

As for the arts, he said the conference action pointed to a "new strategy in church evangelism, unrecognized by many church people" in past years.

Other portions of the message, tentatively approved Tuesday but still up for a final action: 1. Urged that Methodist churches "of every land" seek means to make the "faith of the Bible" and "integral and central part" of the education of children and young people.

2. Declared the church is "committed to the establishment of a human society in which discrimination or segregation based on race or color no longer exists," and added: "The conference expresses its earnest desire that Methodists themselves initiate, contend for and continue to foster within their own societies a genuine and all-inclusive fellowship."

3. Called for "every attempt to secure a reduction of the crippling burden of armaments, as in particular the cessation of the development of nuclear power for purposes of war."

4. Declared that "in spite of some encouragement" there is not yet convincing "evidence of a wide spread revival of religion" and that the resurgence of some ancient, nationalist religions are obstructing Christianity.

5. Condemned the devotion of "sinful men" to the "God's of secularism, realism, extreme nationalism, oppressive imperialism" and the "widespread disintegration of personal moral standards."

6. Urged Methodists to work to improve "inadequate living conditions" in various parts of the world, to care for "all who are oppressed and to foster all that leads to reconciliation and trust between nations."

7. Called for "fuller expression" of the "God-given unity" of Christianity. In the section on science and the arts, the conference said these fields give "to our generation new possibilities of a kind undreamed of by previous generations." "The work of Christian poets and dramatists is both a witness to the work of the Holy Spirit and a powerful reminder to those inside and outside the church that Christ is Lord of the mind." The statement added that "there quate as those in New York or elsewhere "We have every contact we need or can use for communication," he said. "Junaluska is accessible by air, bus, train or car."

He added, it takes about as long to go from New York's Idlewild Airport to Manhattan as it does from the Asheville airport. Coming to this assembly ground by car, he said, is more convenient to most Methodists.

As for the state's segregation policies, Jones said: "That there are some things about the laws of North Carolina that may not suit some persons we do not deny."

"But there are things about the laws of Australia, South Africa, of Latin America that we regret, and actual conditions in New York we wish were otherwise."

"As fellow Methodists we must hold our loving fellowship in the bonds of peace and pray that each in his own area may work for the coming of God's kingdom."

This assembly ground, built up with numerous lodging, recreation, meeting and other structures dotting the mountain slopes and lake shore, is owned by the church's Southeastern Jurisdiction.

Jones said the council has been offered "without cost" a "complete, modern, fireproof, attractive office and archives building," and added:

"If it is not so used, in all fairness, it must be turned back to Lake Junaluska Assembly, Inc."

composed of A. D. Harrison, Roger Ammons, Cecil Jennings and Frank Moore.

At the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce here Tuesday night, Ned Tucker, executive vice president, expressed an opinion that efforts should be made now to get a Home Arts, and Livestock buildings on the county property between here and Lake Junaluska.

Tucker said he was of the opinion that a corporation should be set up with the farmers taking the lead in selling subscriptions in the corporation such as was done to acquire the $50,000 swimming pool, recently completed.

"This is a county-wide affair," Tucker said, "and needless to say, the farmers are going to have to take the lead, with all business and civic leaders following them."

The Home Arts building could be used for a dual purpose—a curb market, and a Home Arts building. The livestock building would provide a space and building for shows and sales of livestock," Tucker continued.

Virgil Holloway, county agent, and Miss Mary Cornwall, county home demonstration agent, will be at the next board meeting to discuss the proposals, Tucker said.

The wide-spread publicity on the modern new swimming pool just completed here and Recreation Center created much interest, Tucker said. He pointed out he had had a number of visitors to Western North Carolina call or come by and inspect the facilities, while others have written in for additional information.

is a need for us to seek a more complete understanding of our belief that the earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof."

Poetry In A Will

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP)—Robert S. Stanford, a piano tuner, left a two-stanza poem as a will bequeathing his estate, of undisclosed size, to his widow.

As probated, it read:

"These few lines shall be my will, And my request when I am old and still, All my property, both personal and real, I leave to my wife after the funeral bill.

Even my dog and his covey of fleas . . . To sell, or trade or do as she please, I don't want her in an embarrassing fix, So will let her be the administratrix.

There shall be no bond for her to make Or I'll do my best my corpse to wake."

Car Trouble

MURPHYSBORO, Ill. (AP)—Harry Ralston, local Moose Lodge governor, pitched in to help bartenders serve customers celebrating the lodge's sixth birthday.

He was doing OK until a customer asked for a "screwdriver," a new drink made with vodka. It stumped him for a few seconds until he walked to a storage drawer and produced a small screwdriver.

"No," the customer said. "It's a drink."

"Oh!" Ralston said. "I thought you were having trouble with your car and needed a screwdriver."
