

Crabtree Churches Set Varied Events

MRS. MILLARD FERGUSON
Community Reporter

The Baptist WMU on Lower Crabtree are holding their week of prayer services for State missions this week, Monday through Friday evenings at 7:30 at the church.

Thursday evening the GA's will have the service, which will be out-thinging.

The Rev. Gay Chambers, pastor of Crabtree Baptist Church, is giving a series of lectures on the Book of Revelations each Thursday night at 7:30 at the church. These lectures will continue until the entire Book is covered. The public is invited to attend.

Several of our community have taken advantage of the opportunity to hear speakers of world-wide note at Lake Junaluska recently.

The homecoming at the Riverside Community Center will be held Sunday, beginning at 11 o'clock. The Rev. W. F. Ferguson will conduct the morning worship service. Fellowship lunch will be Visitors of Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Holt last week were Mr. and Mrs.

Speaking of Homemaking

MORE LIGHT FROM YOUR LAMPS

Light was the first gift of electricity to modern living. It is still one of the most important benefits you can enjoy. Are you making the most of light to protect the eyes of your family, to beautify your home?

The chances are that some of your portable lamps are among the oldest appliances you own. Of course, many improvements have been made in lamp design and efficiency since you bought them. Fortunately, you don't have to replace serviceable old lamps with new ones to bring home lighting up to date. Nowadays you can modernize most lamps simply by changing the bulbs and one or two fittings.

You can buy bulbs with built-in reflectors, bulbs with a new kind of inside frosting that softens and diffuses light without loss of efficiency. You can buy three-way bulbs that give you a choice of three "levels" of lighting at the twist of a switch.

Older style lamps are readily adapted to the new bulbs. Metal "horns" are made to fit the new shapes. A lamp can be converted in a matter of minutes—and you'll be amazed at the difference in lighting quality.

FUN IN THE KITCHEN

Many wonderful parties start in the kitchen—and stay there. Sometimes you don't call them parties exactly—like the housewife's second cup of coffee after the children and husband have left, or the children's after-school snack, or the teenagers' late evening ice-box raid.

The kind of hospitality we all remember is the kind that makes us feel at home. This is as true for children as for adults. Letting the children play host as often as possible to their own guests teaches them the social graces. Let them entertain in the kitchen, serving the kind of snacks they like—even if it's as simple as milk and cookies after school. Help them plan if they need help, but don't take over.

Here are short-cuts that you and the family can use—when folks drop in or when you have less time than usual to prepare for guests: Keep a stock of frozen and canned prepared foods, so that a meal can be prepared easily and quickly if necessary.

Plan one-dish meals that go from oven to table in the same casserole. With a salad, and fresh fruit and cheese, this can be company fare.

Serve some meals and beverages in disposable plates and cups. These can be a boon for children's parties, not just because they're convenient and sanitary, but also because they help avoid dish breakage.

Relax. Remember, the guests didn't come to watch you work. They came to share and enjoy your company.

Thinking ahead—working together using what you have to get what you want—making healthful meals safely, easily and with less work and more fun, all add up to creative management in the kitchen, which adds to your assurance of a fuller life.
