Blouses Step Out From Dawn To Night

IVY LEAGUE . . . Multi-colored striped cotton shirt with button-down collar for campus.

AFTERNOON ELEGANCE . . . Cashmere-like nylon jersey blouse with soft tied neckline and smooth shoulders washes like a breeze.

AFTER FIVE . . . Sheer pastel nylon georgette blouse with delicate schiffli embroidery detail goes gaily to the theater. All by Judy Bond.

GIVE A GIRL enough blouses, shorts and skirts, and she can be correctly dressed for any occasion, from weeding the garden to attending the theater.

Today's girls never seem to have enough blouses. They collect them like some people collect matchbooks or butterflies. To the school-girl, a baby-sitting job means money for a new blouse. To her mother, a new blouse means a thrifty way of expanding a basic wardrobe.

This fall's crop of shirts and blouses is up to new tricks. For wear with the ever-popular Bermuda shorts the girls like the Ivy League look this year — dark striped boy-shirts with button-down collars, a button on the back of the collar and a pleat in back. Most popular color combinations are black or charcoal gray with cluster stripes in red, green or brown.

For dressier wear with skirts there are many flattering, new softly detailed blouses, with the season's important ladylike look achieved through delicate touches of lace or embroidery, Edwardian ruffles, feminine necklines, bell-banded cuffs.

New sheer georgette and chiffon blouses team gracefully with velvet or satin skirts for dinner and theater wear.

The nice thing about most of the new blouses is that they can be washed as easily as a pair of nylons and be ready to wear the next day with little or no ironing. Among popular fabrics this season are cashmere soft nylon jersey, fine handkerchief batiste of cotton and dacron, the new never-iron Matrique (nylon and dacron), iridescent silk broadcloth and decorative cotton knits in heather mixtures or solid colors.

And if you think American women don't like blouses, consider the fact that they bought 168 million of them last year, spending over a half billion dollars for them.

STATE COLLEGE ANSWERS TIMELY FARM QUESTIONS

QUESTION: What must dairy cows be fed in the winter?

ANSWER: Successful winter feeding means imitating early summer conditions as near as possible. The dairy cow is by nature a roughage consuming animal. She does her best when supplied with plenty of roughage. In winter this roughage should be a legume hay and a succulent feed. The better the quality, the more of the required nutrients will be received from the roughage and the smaller the amount of grain that will be needed.

should roses be planted?

ANSWER: Except in the highest elevations of the mountains, fall is the best time for planting roses. However, early spring planting is generally satisfactory. In either case, dig the hole large enough so the roots can be spread out as they would naturally grow. Remove all broken roots. Cut the plant back to five or six inches at time of planting. Mound soil over the stem of the plant and leave it in this position until new shoots start growing in the spring. Then remove the mound of soil. Set plants about 2 1/2 feet apart.
