Large Number Of Haywood H.S. Seniors Visit Champion

More than 200 enthusiastic graduating seniors, representing three Haywood County high schools, visited the Carolina division of the Champion Paper and Fibre Company Wednesday as the company's 6th annual "Senior Week at Champion" program swung into action. Taking a good look at Champion were seniors from Waynesville, Crabtree-Iron Duff and Clyde high schools. They were accompanied by faculty members. Canton Hi and Reynolds Hi, both of Canton, and Bethel Hi seniors visited Champion for the same program today. A total of 223 seniors, the largest single delegation expected for the annual event, is anticipated from these schools. Enka High School with 143 seniors, and Fines Creek High School, in Haywood County with a total of 18 senior class members, will wind up the 3-day program Friday. A total of 10 separate career guidance sessions, ranging from agriculture to engineering, are featured each day. Seniors pick their choice of the ones in which they are most interested. These teen-age guests, who'll graduate from their respective schools next spring, were shown special movies during the morning session. They were welcomed by J. E. Williamson, of industrial and community relations department, and heard A. M. Fairbrother, assistant general manager of the Carolina division, speak briefly on "Getting Better Acquainted With Champion". A panel discussion on "Preparation for the Future" also was featured. The panel was comprised of Don Randolph, supervisor of Training, moderator; R. B. Patterson, supervisor of personnel research; J. M. Barnes, manager of industrial and community relations, and Harold Hansen, superintendent of utilities department. The guests received special souvenirs plus informative booklets on Champion's mammoth operations. The mill tour is conducted each afternoon following lunch in Champion's cafeteria. The tour completes the day's program at about 2:45 p.m.
