Senator Ervin Sees Unity Between Both Parties As World Situation Is Tense

By SENATOR SAM ERVIN

WASHINGTON—With the world in turmoil, the people of our country are focusing their attention on the Administration to see what steps will be taken.

CONGRESS

As this is written, the general election results indicate that 49 Democrats and 47 Republicans were elected to the Senate on November 6. If that is the final figure, Democrats will control the Senate by the same margin as in the last Congress.

Democrats won more easily in the House and have clinched control there. It means that Reps. Cooley, Barden, Durham, and Bonner will have highly important committee chairmanships, giving North Carolina important seniority.

TOPSY-TURVY

A number of things combined to produce an unusual situation with respect to the Presidency and Congress. Democrats generally ran well at the local levels, and their strength was greatly increased in normally heavily Republican areas of the country; Republicans made inroads with Mr. Eisenhower in normally Democratic sections. It is indeed a topsy-turvy situation, and a situation in which there seems to be considerable consolation for both parties in the picture as a whole. For example, the President ran well ahead of his party as an individual, and local Democrats captured a lot of offices in Republican territory.

UNITY

The important thing now is to put the welfare of our country first. That is my purpose, and I am confident that my Democratic colleagues will cooperate with the President when they feel that his program is best for the country. He had that cooperation from Democrats in the past Congress, and I see no reason for a change.

All of us realize the gravity of the world situation. The sudden world crisis arose at a time when it probably caused a great deal of people not to want to make a change during a period of severe international stress. In any event, the election is history.

THANKS

I am deeply appreciative of the confidence the people of North Carolina again placed in me. Thank you everyone. No political office can be taken for granted. I worked day and night to get around North Carolina. It was a physical strain, but rewarding in so many aspects that one in political life seldom thinks of the physical demands. This is perhaps one reason why so many public figures overtax their energies.

Prior to his departure for New Orleans, Mr. Perry was the principal speaker at Area Vestry Meeting of Episcopal Churches in Lenoir and Gastonia and was host to a similar meeting here in Waynesville which some 40 representatives of nearby Episcopal churches attended.

The latter were part of Mr. Perry's duties in the several offices he holds in the Diocese of Western North Carolina. He is chairman of the Department of Christian Education, member of the Executive Council, and a member of the Department of Promotion.

Last year Mr. Perry served as president of the Haywood County Ministerial Association and has just been elected chairman of the Hospital Chaplaincy program undertaken by the group. He was also recently guest chaplain for the
