Six Magazine Salesmen Sent Out Of Haywood

Six magazine salesmen were told by officers to get out of Haywood, after Chief of Police Roy Stephens, and Sheriff Fred Y. Campbell, interviewed each of them, and four of them were going under assumed names as they worked this area.

A number of complaints have come to officers about solicitors who accepted checks and money and the buyers failed to receive the magazines ordered.

Chief Stephens said five of the six were cripples, and the sixth a diabetic. Two of the solicitors had several cancelled checks on them, the officers said.
