

Powell And Ginger Roger Feature In "Star of Midnight" At Duplin Theatre Next Week

The Duplin opens its program Monday with some very unusual attractions for the week. Beginning the week William Powell and Ginger Rogers will play in "Star of Midnight". For the midweek attraction, Jack Holt will be seen in "The Defense Rests", while the Saturday Westerner will be "Voice In The Night" with Tim McCoy.

The following sketches of two of the pictures will be interesting. Presenting William Powell and Ginger Rogers, two of the screen's outstanding favorites, and telling a story replete with mystery, suspense, romance and comedy. "Star of Midnight" is a delightfully entertaining and completely absorbing picture.

Powell and Miss Rogers, teamed for the first time in this RKO-Radio production, are absolutely at home in roles made to order for their talents. As a modern Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson combination, they work to solve a murder mystery. Their detective team-work is unique, to say the least, with the delectable Miss Rogers providing more laughs and heart throbs than clues, although she does inadvertently manage to provide Powell with the key to the whole mystery.

The well-conceived, closely-knit plot moves gaily at times and at other times with stark tenacity toward a hair-raising climax. The romantic theme is subtly woven into the main story.

Supporting performances by Ralph Morgan, Gene Lockhart, Leslie Fenton, Paul Kelly, Russell Hopton, J. Farrell MacDonald and a long array of other capable performers, are excellent. Morgan and Lockhart are particularly entertaining.

Stephen Roberts, the director, has imparted just the same name by that master of mystery fiction the late Arthur Somers Roche. Howard J. Green, Anthony Veller and Edward Kaufman did a grand job with the adaptation.

"Star of Midnight", presents Powell and Miss Rogers at their best in a really outstanding story and, as anyone knows, that means brilliant entertainment.

The amusing account of what happens to a perfect English butler-valet when he is exposed to American ideas of Democracy, is the plot and story of "Ruggles of Red Gap."

The picture, adapted from Harry Leon Wilson's famous story, first published in the Saturday Evening Post, features Mary Boland, Charlie Ruggles, Roland Young, Zasu Pitts and Lella Hyams in support of Laughton.

"Ruggles'" adventures begin when his titled master loses him to an American tourist and his wife in a poker game. On his first day in his new job, Ruggles takes his ebullient master out to view London's art galleries and winds up with him in a drunken spree.

Back to Red Gap, F. S. A., a crude but stimulating Western town of the 1900's, goes "Ruggles" with his American employers. And when his master introduces him to the society big-wigs of Red Gap as a Colonel of the English Army, "Ruggles" becomes the social favorite of the town.

"Ruggles'" former master turns up in Red Gap to find a completely altered butler who engineers his lordship into a romance with a lovely American lady. Finally, "Ruggles" himself finds romance with the town's leading widow and becomes the town's leading restaurateur.

Maude Eburne and Lucien Littlefield, both veterans of the stage and screen are prominently cast in supporting roles. Leo McCarey, recognized throughout filmdom for his comedy work, directed "Ruggles of Red Gap."

Electric Refrigerator Units In Glass Cases

Housewives who have enjoyed the advantages of an electric refrigerator in their home and those who have been harboring such thoughts for sometime will be interested in visiting the office of the Tide Water Power Company in Warsaw and observing the operating unit of the electric refrigerators there on display. The electric box has become so common that a large number of homes everywhere have them but very few people are familiar with the workings of the machine. Tide Water has displayed in its window and show rooms the actual working parts at work in a glass case of the General Electric sealed in unit and of the Westinghouse unit. It is interesting to watch these two pieces of machinery operate. It is easy to listen to someone explain the operations of a piece of machinery but when one actually sees the operation it improves their understanding of the machine.

The two units will be in the show rooms for several days and will continue to operate without stopping. Tide Water invites you to inspect them.
