OPEN FORUM

(The Editor of the TIMES not only welcomes but urges its readers to use the columns of this newspaper to express their feelings and sentiments about affairs of government, and livelihood in general among the peoples of this county. We will be glad to publish these letters but ask that they be signed. It is not absolutely necessary that we publish the name but must know the author of the letters.)

Advertising Liquor

Now the papers are to advertise liquor in North Carolina. Why advertise any commodity? Every one knows, to increase its use. The legislation in the name of control and temperance was primarily for the consumption of more liquor. Had those men been honest the truth would have been told. The effort at present is to make the folks believe that this advertising is for the sake of moderation. Do not the liquor folks know that drunkenness starts with the first drink. This contention is on all fours with the claim of the liquor store crowd. With carload after carload coming into the state, tens of thousands of dollars worth of the poison dispensed and the insidious efforts to increase its consumption, it becomes every man and woman who has the welfare of youth and coming generations at heart to begin a well organized crusade in every county against liquor and in favor of sobriety. Delay is dangerous. To buy up the columns of the press is the hope of the liquor crowd. All this for the sake of tax money.

Editor Duplin Times

Dear Sir:—
I will thank you to allow me a little space in your good paper to call attention to the fact that our Board of Commissioners are not keeping faith with the people of this county. They have raised the tax rate 15 cents when it should have been lowered. They are borrowing money to build more school buildings when the county is not able to maintain the ones it now has.

If we don't begin to change our way of living in this old world and especially Duplin County we are headed for complete destruction. When I think of it I feel like Christ felt when He wept over Jerusalem.

People today are living for what? They are worshipping idols, they have forgotten God and are headed straight for hell unless we change our ways of living.

When I was a boy I walked for miles to school and now a child can't walk out the front doorstep without having a bus to drive up and haul it away to some large school building where it only learns the ways of the world.

We must turn back. We must get back to the teachings of God that man must earn his living by the sweat of his brow and fear the Lord.

If we cannot have public education without taxing the very life out of the people then we had better burn every school building in the country and go back to the old days when education was gotten by reading by log fires.

I want to warn the Honorable Gentlemen who are taking the liberty to thrust more taxes on the people without their will. If the Board of Commissioners would do what the people want them to they will burn the so-called budget and make a new one, cancel the loan from the Government and reduce taxes.

Yours truly,
JESSE VAUSE

J. R. O'Daniel Writes Of Descendants Of Duplin Emigrants

The following letter was written to the Times by James R. (Rommie) O'Daniel, of Fort Worth Texas. Mr. O'Daniel is a son of Duplin and for several years has been practicing law in Fort Worth.

Pink Hill, N. C.
August 6th., 1935

Editor, Duplin Times:

Enroute from Texas on my present visit to Charlotte, I stopped at Rutherford, Tennessee, where I found a number of descendants of emigrants from Duplin County who settled in that State one-hundred years ago. During the year 1834, Annie (Keathley) O'Daniel, and four of her sons, Alexander, Johnathan, Stephen and John, left their home in the forks of the Northeast and Goshen, and by ox-cart and horse-back crossed over the mountains of western North Carolina into Tennessee and slowly made their way to the western part of the latter State in search of new homes. They settled near Rutherford, Tennessee, and bought farms. Their descendants are now prominent citizens of that section of the State. These emigrants were neighbors of David Crockett of Alamo fame. The log houses of the O'Daniel brothers are still standing in good state of preservation near where the log house that David Crockett formerly lived and stood. In Walnut Grove cemetery the monuments of the brothers, now dim with age, still mark their last resting places. A curious fact is that the monument of Annie (Keathley) O'Daniel, their mother, was never erected, but reposes on the premises of the old home-place of Alexander, her son, bearing the legend, Annie O'Daniel, born 1798, died 1838. She was also the mother of the James O'Daniel, Sr., who remained in Duplin County, and died at his home between Sarecta and Hallsville in 1901. The writer also found members of the Keathley and Gresham family descendants of Duplin County emigrants, and learned that one Robert Grady, whose wife's name was Tennie, and whose sons names were Franklin, William and Henry were living near Rutherford many years ago, but that their descendants are now living near Memphis, Tennessee. Because of their family names, undoubtedly, they, too, came from Duplin County. Perhaps some of the relatives of these people will be interested in learning of their kinsmen in Tennessee.

The Yankees "Can't Take It" Writes Rev. Fitzgerald

Poughkeepsie, N. Y.
Aug. 5th., 1935.

Editor, Duplin Times:

"In his country and among his own kin." Among the very bitter enemies of President Roosevelt's policies some one was named Alice Roosevelt Longworth, the "Queen of the Bee Hive Gossip". Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., charges that the real aim of the $4,800,000,000 appropriation is not relief, but the purchase of votes in 1936. So much for the "kin."

The people around Poughkeepsie boast that the depression—if there was a depression—brought them no bank failure, no business failure except the little fly-by-night affairs. There was never any complete cessation of building. Out in Iowa and down in Carolina they may love the AAA and hate the Blue Eagle; New England may cling to the Housing Act while loathing the processing Tax. In Dutchess County, the president's home, the New Deal is hated from whereas to Ames. It is contrary, they say to their traditions, to their philosophy, and to their interests. Not many of us would like a man who took more out of our pocket to put it into some other pocket. Hamilton Fish, the Herald-Tribune, the Poughkeepsie News Eagle are telling the people here that the President is taking money away from the East, transferring it to the South and the West; that he is taking away from those that have to give it to those who have not; that he is robbing the thrifty and the prudent to support the lazy and shiftless.

In January the president said: "We must create a new order of things". For the dwellers in the Hudson Valley the old order of things, like the old-time religion whatever that may be is good enough.

"A new order of things." Does this mean Italy's Fascism, Germany's Nazism, or Russia's Communism? These are words that they use up here to frighten men, women, and children.

As a minister I do not deal with merely partisan politics. I do wish to make a prediction. The election in 1936 will follow the bitterest and most scurrilous campaign since 1860. It is the sacred duty of us all to think just as highly, just as clearly, just as straight as possible in this critical period of our history.

Truly yours,
JOHN T. FITZGERALD.
