Reports have been received that weevils in all kinds of grain are very numerous this year, and it is expected that, unless farmers take some steps to prevent it, much damage will be done to grain, particularly corn, during the winter.

The control of the corn weevil, or any other insect of grains, is a easy matter. By the use of a fumigate, those insects can be destroyed in the crib or bin, at very little expense and before very much damage is done. By the use of paradichlorobenzene, which is inexpensive, when the grain is first harvested, the increase of these insects can be prevented. Nearly all corn cribs, if they are prepared before hand, can be used effectively.

Any farmer interested in this insect control will be given detailed instructions, if he will see or communicate with the County Agent.

The Menace Of Scrap Tobacco

The sale of scrap tobacco is a menace to the prosperity of tobacco growers.

Every pound of scrap tobacco sold displaces a pound of leaf tobacco.

It is estimated that 20,000,000 pounds of scrap were "bootlegged" last season in Eastern Carolina. The sale of this scrap has contributed materially to surplus stocks and has had an effect upon this season's price level.

For years the tobacco warehouses, acting for the best interests of the growers, have discouraged the sale of scrap, and in recent years its sale on the auction floor has been eliminated.

But "bootlegging" has revived the menace.

FACTS REGARDING THE SALE OF SCRAP TOBACCO

1. Every person buying scrap tobacco, except established dealer, who purchases it at his factory door, is liable to the State of North Carolina for a tax of $1,000.00 for each county in which he makes a purchase ("1935 Laws of North Carolina," Chapter 360).

2. Every contracting grower who permits scrap to be removed from his farm violates his contract, unless the scrap is entered upon his marketing card. Failure to enter every sale of scrap tobacco on the marketing card renders a contracting grower liable to the Government for one-third of the total value of his tobacco sales.

3. To give, sell or otherwise dispose of scrap tobacco is a violation of the production adjustment contract, unless it is entered on the marketing card. It is the positive duty of a contracting grower to see that his scrap does not get into the channels of trade.

Government experts say that scrap tobacco has a value of at least two cents per pound as fertilizer. The poundage on allotment cards is worth four cents per pound. Therefore, a producer actually loses money unless scrap tobacco sells for six cents a pound or more.

Tobacco growers, for their own protection and for the protection of the program of production control, are urged to take necessary steps to see that their packhouse scrap is actually destroyed or used as fertilizer.
