

Six Murder Cases, 2 Capital Charges Before Judge Grady

Three weeks of Superior Court will convene here next Monday with Judge Henry A. Grady, presiding. The first week will be taken up with criminal cases while the second two will be used for trying civil actions.

Among criminal cases to be heard are six murder cases and one charge of house breaking, probably a capital offense. John Brinson, colored, will be tried for the killing of A. J. Merritt, Kenansville citizen, in an automobile accident on April 29, 1933. Ab Phillips, negro, will be tried for cutting to death Meriman Middleton, colored, on November 18th, 1933.

Leslie Boney, negro, killed William Stallings, negro in an auto wreck, March 2nd of this year.

Woodrow Joseph, white of Faison, will face trial for the murder of Henry Smith, negro, in Faison on September 3rd, this year. Buster Hill, negro, is charged with killing Octavia Wilson with a knife on October 12th, 1934.

Gibbons Hicks of Faison will face trial on possibly first degree burglary charge.

HEELS TO MEET VIRGINIA TEAM ON TURKEY DAY

Thousands Will Be Expected To Flock To Hill

Chapel Hill, Nov. 25—The University of North Carolina will wind up the best season on the gridiron since 1929, when the Tar Heels lost only to Georgia, should they win the Thanksgiving game from Virginia.

And with this in mind it is a safe prediction that the Carolina coaches and players will leave no stones unturned in their preparations for the Virginia invasion.

Since it will be their last opportunity to see one of the greatest teams in Carolina's history in action, thousands of fans are expected to flock to Chapel Hill Thursday. They will be expecting a Carolina victory, of course, but since this seems to be such a season of upsets, it would be foolish for anybody to feel that Carolina has this game in the bag.

Who would have thought, for instance, that the Carolina team which beat State 35-8 would lose 25-0 to a Duke team which beat State 7-0? Or who could have imagined that Carolina would beat 19-0 a Georgia Tech team which beat Duke 6-0? It all seems to indicate that comparative scores go haywire when one relies on them in predicting results this season. Maybe it's due to the new rules, maybe it's just football, but the fact remains that the results have the dopesters groggy.

So, while the Carolina players will enter the Virginia game as favorites, they will be very wary, for favorites this year have frequently found themselves riding for a fall without understanding what upset them.

There are reasons for assuming that the Carolina-Virginia game this year will be a nip-and-tuck affair. Virginia has a club that has demonstrated a powerful defense all along and a colorful offense that is extremely dangerous when it is hitting on all eleven cylinders.

Coach Doc Newton of Davidson says the Wildcats were extremely lucky to draw a tie with Virginia early in the season.

"If they play Carolina like they played us, the Tar Heels will be in for an interesting afternoon," Coach Newton said the other day. "In the game with us the Cavaliers played unorthodox football, throwing passes, and doing just about everything else when least expected. Their passing attack, which features a good assortment of laterals and forwards, is especially tricky and bewildering."

In their touchdown against the Navy the Cavaliers pulled one of the most spectacular plays of the season, a beautiful forward-lateral pass that left the Middle moments groggy.

INCOME INCREASING, BRAZIL'S COTTON PROBLEMS FINANCIAL EXPERTS VIEW, FARM AID HELPS NOW.

From DUPLIN TIMES Washington Bureau.

Farm income for 1935 is now estimated at $8,800,000,000 by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics. This is one-hundred million dollars more than earlier estimates, $418,000,000 more than last year and the largest total in five years.

Among other reasons for the increase, the Bureau lists a "greater than seasonal improvement in the income of industrial workers." This should be interesting to farmers, emphasizing as it does the inter-relationship between the buying power of workers and the sale of agricultural products.

Along the lines of the interdependence of farmers and workers we call attention to a recent statement of George T. Hughes, a special writer on financial topics. He says:

"Whatever may be thought of the economic soundness of Government aid to the farmer it is still true that the purchasing power of the agricultural districts has been enlarged and the benefits have not been confined to the rural population, but have extended to the industrial sections as well.

Try This Recipe on Your Thanksgiving Turkey

DRESS, clean, stiff, and truss turkey. Brush thoroughly with an unsalted fat. Place in roasting pan, cover, and roast in a moderate oven (350°). Allow 20 minutes per pound for a 15-pound turkey, 17 minutes per pound for a 18-pound turkey, and 15 minutes per pound for a 22-pound turkey. Brush with butter just before serving. And here's a hint about taking care of that grease-splattered roasting pan. Soak pan in hot water, then wipe with a piece of absorbent paper. Then to clean the pan efficiently but at the same time to avoid scratching it, use the cleanser made with aiselomote. Sprinkle this cleanser over the surface and rub gently with a damp cloth. When you rinse and dry the pan, it will be spick-and-span clean; it will be beautifully polished, too.

To Grandmother's House We'll Go.

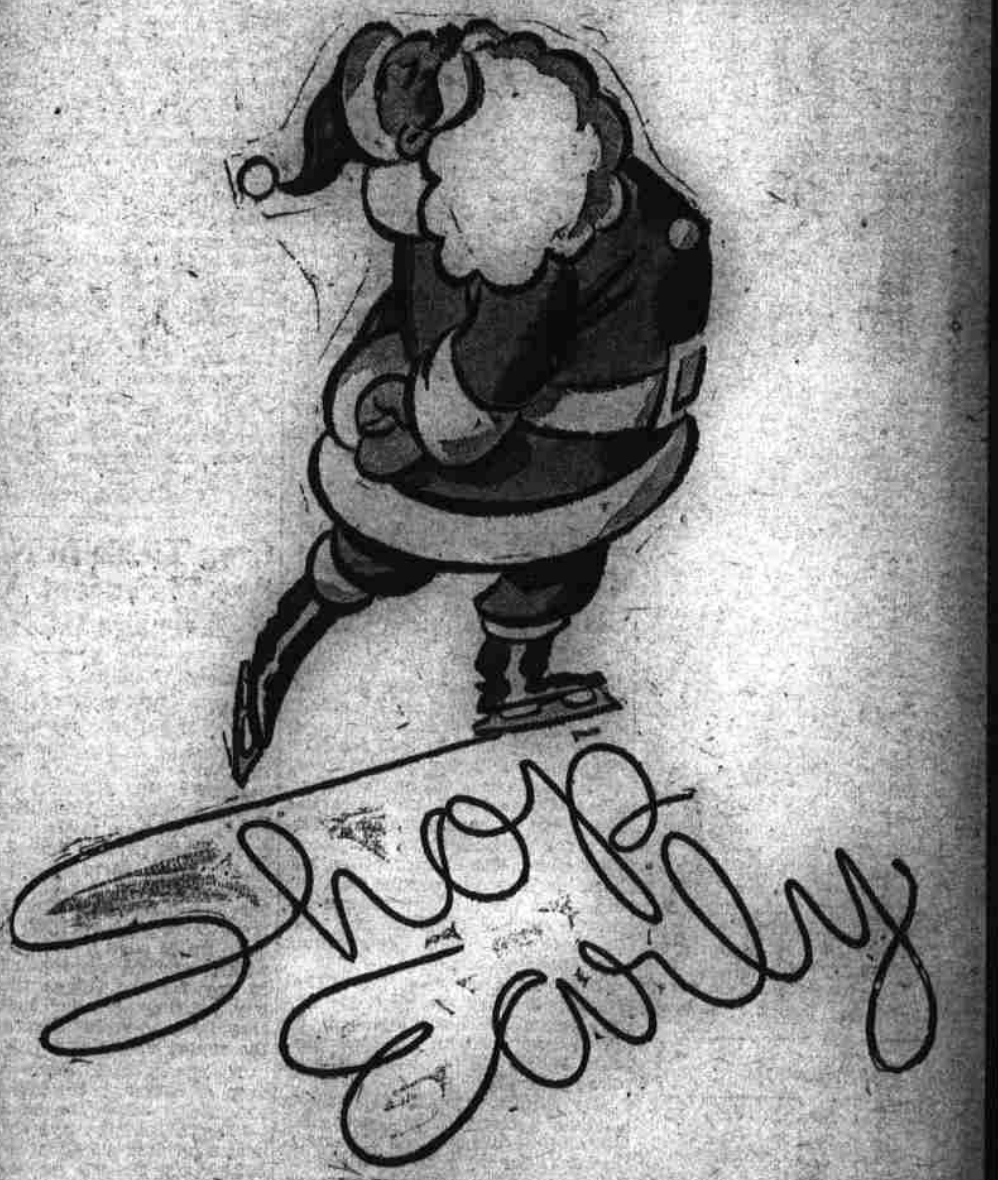

Grandmother's way . . . the traditional manner to celebrate Thanksgiving. Behind a horse, through miles of fresh snow, to a six-foot fireplace or a pot-bellied stove. Frosty window panes in the morning, and water from a tin bucket. Row upon row of preserves . . . hour upon hour of work. Pumpkin from the back forty, squash from the kitchen garden, turkey that had grown fat under Grandmother's own guidance.

Such a Thanksgiving is still a treat . . . something to look forward to, and back upon. But for most of us, a different celebration must be planned. We may still go to Grandmother's house . . . but she, too, has learned the added comfort of central heating, of fresh food from tins, of convenient buying.

Underneath, there's still a grateful feeling . . . as much, and more, reason for Thanksgiving as there was three hundred odd years ago. We haven't watched ALL of the evolution . . . but we, too, started with Grandmother's house in Grandmother's way . . . and we've helped modernize it! And we're as proud and happy in the result as we are in once more watching the holiday roll around, and once more joining our thanks with the thanks of our customers and friends.
