With The LEGISLATURE in RALEIGH

United Press Staff Correspondent

RALEIGH, N. C., Jan 18 —The General Assembly moved into full stride of floor sessions and committee hearings today with a week of real work behind it and many of the most important issues scheduled to appear well crystallized.

In the first full week of its 1937 session, the legislature:

1. Heard Gov. Clyde R. Hoey deliver his budget message on a budget that was not really his, and reserve the right to make further comment on the work of the advisory commission which drew up the document.

2. Took the appropriations and revenue bills and tossed them immediately to committees, whose members then began the usual process of dissecting them thoroughly before reporting back on the floors of the chambers.

3. Received two liquor bills, one "wet" and one "dry" and there thereby cleared the path for a real fist swinging battle on the prohibition issue.

4. Cleared the way for concentrated action on major issues later by pushing along as rapidly as possible innumerable "local" bills, pertaining to a single county, city or person.

5. Heard Gov. Paul McNutt, recently-retired chief executive of Indiana, declare before a joint session Friday that many elective offices should be abolished in the interests of economical and efficient government.

Most spectacular issue of the week to appear in floor deliberations was liquor — but the one that put the wrinkles in the brows of key men in both houses was money.

The budget and the appropriations bill made no provisions for social security funds, and provision there must be, as all but a very few of the legislators agree. With several new forms of taxation contained in the revenue bill to make up for the loss in state income from abolition of the sales tax on food and necessities, financial experts of the assembly consider it hardly wise to contemplate adding still more new forms of taxation. The income tax under the new amendment can be increased to ten per cent from the former maximum of six per cent, but that is not enough. There must be

JAMES KENAN CHAPTER W.D.C. HOLDS MEETING JAN. 14

WARSAW, January 19 — The January meeting of the James Kenan Chapter, U. D. C. was held Thursday afternoon at the home of the president, Mrs. John M. Peirce. The meeting opened with a prayer, followed by the ritual and a song, "How Firm a Foundation". Agnes Best, a C. of C. member, gracefully presented excerpts from an essay on Lee which she had written. Mrs. Chas. Carroll read some facts from the life of Jackson. Incidents in Jackson's life were told by Mrs. Harvey Boney.

"Tenting Tonight" was played by Mrs. D. E. Best, after which, the members rose and saluted the flag. Mrs. John M. Peirce presented the chapter with a copy of "Gone With the Wind" by Margaret Mitchell. Mrs. J. W. Farrior, former State Leader of the C. of C., announced that North Carolina won six of the fifteen prizes offered the states by the general convention; she also exhibited two silver cups won by the C. of C. A Stratford Wedgwood plate was presented to Mrs. J. M. Peirce, the retiring president.

T. A. Turner And Co. Pink Hill's Newest Store; Resources Quarter Million

Random Shots From The Voags Of Chinquapin

We are still adding a few things to our equipment. We expect to have set up this week a tobacco seed cleaner. This will be available for the use of all the farmers in this community any afternoon. Do not bring tobacco seed to clean in the morning.

We are prepared to do a limited amount of fruit tree work until it is too late to look after work of that kind. Let us know if you would like to have your trees pruned.

We are planning to hold an Evening School for the adult farmers at some convenient time in the near future. We hope to have the farmers get together and name a number of farm topics which they would like to discuss and secure information on. We have no special course set up for the adult classes but anything they want will be given if possible.

The government hires agriculture workers to help the farmers to raise more and better crops. Uncle Dick Hileman says he has wondered a thousand times why Uncle Sam does not hire some one to teach them how to raise fewer "younguns" and better ones. If the "youngun" crop would fall as often as the other crops, the schools could operate on a 100 per cent efficiency basis. Uncle Dick says that the way the thing is now the big figures are getting on the wrong side of the school ledger. You have got to have cash as well as children to have education.

It looks very much like we are going to have compulsory crop control, Uncle Dick says. "It is a ding pity a farmer can't run his business without somebody to help him". Let us have whatever is best for all concerned.

more money from somewhere, and many a legislator would trade his Number One committee assignment for a solution to the problem that would satisfy all concerned.

On another page will be found an advertisement announced the merger of two of Pink Hill's oldest and strongest firms. T. A. Turner and L. C. Turner and Son consolidated their businesses, January 1, 1937 and are now known as the T. A. Turner and Company, Inc., incorporated with a paid in capital of $80,000 and authorized capital of $300,000. The firm now has resources in excess of a quarter million dollars. Officers are T. A. Turner, President, L. C. Turner, vice-president, C. C. Jones, secretary and Lynwood Turner, treasurer.

The business houses of the Turners in Pink Hill date back many years to George (Squire) Turner, father of T. A. and L. C. Turner. The late George Turner was the founder of Pink Hill and operated a business there some forty years ago.

In 1904 T. A. Turner and his late brother H. R. Turner who died in 1928 began business under the name of Turner Brothers. In 1912 L. C. Turner bought out the interest of H. R. Turner and became associated with the firm. It continued as Turner Brothers until 1920 when T. A. Turner bought the interest of L. C. and began operating under the name of T. A. Turner. L. C. Turner opened a business for himself in 1926 and in 1934 took his son Lynwood in as a partner. The firm then became the L. C. Turner and Son. The two Turner houses operated until January 1, 1937 when again T. A. and L. C. associated themselves again. The new firm is one of the largest and strongest in this section of the state. Your attention is called to their advertisement.

Fireworks of the liquor issue concentrated on two bills introduced in the House during the week, neither of which has a more than ten in one chance of passing in its original form. The first came from a bloc of dry representatives headed by Mrs. Charles Hutchins of Yancey, only woman member of the lower body. It provides a state wide referendum on liquor with the whole state bound by the result, and precludes the plebiscite answer by providing that "sale and manufacture of intoxicating beverages shall be prohibited in North Carolina."

Willard League In Kenansville For Program On Next Sunday At 7:30

The P. Y. P. L. of the Willard Presbyterian Church will be the special guests of the Grove League in Kenansville Sunday evening at 7:30. The program for the evening will be given by the Willard League. All the young people and young peoples organizations of Kenansville are united to give a warm welcome to the visitors. The services will be held in the Grove Presbyterian Church. Following the league program, Rev. F. L. Goodman will preach on "The Disciples of Jesus."
