e, I would favor enactment of a figult to solve, or even adjust it, say that if the choice were left to me, I would favor enactment of a farm program at the present sersion. I belive that the farmers want to plan for the future. I belive that their spokesmen are sincere and know what agriculture needs. I also belive that any program adopted should be designed to meet the needs of the man in overalls with the hoe and that it should be free from unaccessary red tape. So much for my own thoughts.

Obviously, these confronted with drafting farm legislation are faced with the nightmare of overproduction. FARM AND HOME WEEK SUCCESSFUL

"Highly successful," commented State College Extension Service officials when the 1937 edition of Farm and Home Week closed last Saturday.

Smashing all previous attendance records, nearly 2,000 farmers and farm women registered for the 34th annual convention, held each summer at State College. So large was the crowd that the overflow had to be accommodated at Meredith College. Hundreds of others commuted between their homes and the college or spent only one day at the convention.

Speeches, class work, sight-seeing receptions, community singing demonstrations, and recreation occupied the delegates' time from arising in the morning until bedtime.

Prominent political leaders and outstanding agriculturists were scheduled on the program. Included in the list were Governor Hoey, Congressman Harold Cooley, Assistant AAA Administrator J. B. Hutson, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Harry L. Brown, and others.

Separate programs were arranged for men and women. However. joint programs were held during the mornings and at the evening exercises.

Guests of Mrs. Hoey, the farm women were entertained at a reception one day in the Governor's mansion. For nearly all of the women, this was their first visit inside the doors of North Carolina's No. 1 citizen.

Displays spread out over the campus attracted much attention during the five-day program as the delegates viewed pictorial and actual presentment of approved farming and homemaking practic-
