True to the best theatrical traditions, Robert Wilcox was down to his last dollar a year ago, yet today he is on the road to film stardom. His present role in the Twentieth Century-Fox his, "Wild and Woolly," starring Jane Withers and featuring Walter Brennan, coming Monday to the Duplin Theatre, features him romantically opposite Pauline Moore.

Wilcox graduated from the University of Southern California in 1933, and in his undergraduate days did considerable extra work. Ann Sheridan, who in her latest Warner Bros. picture, "The Footloose Heiress," which comes to the Duplin Theatre next Tuesday, is called upon to throw things at Craig Reynolds during angry moments, displayed a startling ability to hurl all sorts of objects with great accuracy. She ascribes it to early training in Texas as a child, when she shied rocks at rattlers with deadly effect.

When "It's All Yours," Columbia's hectic laugh farce, co-starring Francis Lederer and Madeleine Carroll, with Mischa Auer, reaches the screen of the Duplin Theatre Thursday, audiences will see in action what is perhaps the greatest tango dance team of Hollywood.

The team comprises Madeleine Carroll and Mischa Auer, who, although noted for their restrained dignity in Hollywood circles, are considered the finest tango exponents in the film city.

Capitalizing on the fact that booth players appear in the same picture, Columbia decided to write a tango dance sequence into the script.

Movie titles, even more than types of movie stories, come in cycles. Just now, observes at Warner Bros. studio, say the tendency throughout the industry is to pare down the length of picture labels.

Few and far between are the one-word titles, but Kay Francis' latest picture started out as "Marguerite," was re-named briefly "One Hour of Romance," and then went back to a one-worder again this

The North Carolina State Employment Service affiliated with United States Employment Service with offices in the Handley Building, Goldsboro is serving employers and applicants in Goldsboro, Wayne and Duplin counties. In the Goldsboro office J. S. Fleming is Manager; C. A. Spruill, Jr., senior interviewer; Mary S. Beeman, receptionist-stenographer and Fannie H. Johnson, junior clerk-typist. They were appointed to work in the Service from the eligible list established by Merit Examinations.

The Employment Service is not a relief agency. In a booklet entitled "Matching Jobs and Men," a description is given of how the Service works:

"The Employment Service has on its registers thousands of men and women with every known kind of training and experience. They present a complete cross section of unemployed workers of every trade, industry, and profession. The occupational code used by the Service includes 9,000 different job classifications. In a single day an employment office may register a landscape architect, a soft-shoe tap-dancer, a typist, a biologist, a display artist, a factory manager, a wool winder, a laundress, a glass worker, a laborer, a certified public accountant, a tree surgeon, a delicatessen clerk, or a mallet die worker; and many artisans, clerks, and laborers.

Each one of these applicants is given a private interview by a staff member, who specializes in finding jobs for people in a related group of occupations. All available information about the applicant's work history is recorded and kept on file. When an employer notifies the office of an opening, this file is consulted for the best qualified registrants. They are called in for interviews to make sure they fill the bill in every respect. Those that do are referred to the employer for his final selection. Whether or not the person referred by the Employment Service is actually hired rests entirely with the individual applicant and the employer.

From an employer's point of view our Service has many advantages. As we have shown, it saves much wear and tear to have the first general selection of applicants taken care of by the Employment Service. Only picked men, the ones who out of many possibilities most nearly meet the requirements, are sent for an interview with the employer.

This means that every employer who calls on the Service for workers has at his disposal the largest record of available labor in his community, and in the Nation. If an employer's needs cannot be met locally, the Employment Service, through a system for the exchange of information about work opportunities, can comb the country until the right person for the job is found. Through the use of this clearance system, an employment office recently was able to fill orders for a bucker-up (construction industry), a rigger (for airplanes), a hook runner (iron and steel), a heddle hand (textile), a jogger (shipbuilding), a mullaker (mining).

When lay-offs are necessary, employers may suggest that the released men register with the local employment office. This will help the employees to bridge over a difficult adjustment and will make it easy for the firm to get in touch with them when rehiring is possible. The employer who can say to the run of jobseekers, "We do our hiring through the Employment Service," spares himself much in explanations and embarrassment. Incidentally he is passing along a practical hint to the prospective worker.

Employers and persons desiring work of any kind are cordially invited to visit the office. The public is also invited to visit the office and see how the Service works.

time "Confession." It comes to the Duplin Theatre next Friday, with Basil Rathbone, Ian Hunter, Jane Bryan, Mary Maguire, Dorothy Peterson, Robert Barrat, and many others in the supporting cast.
