Beware of "Lost" Puppy or Kitty Doctor Advises

Raleigh, Oct. 14.—Kiddies, beware of the puppy or kitten that "looks lost." It may have rabies, and then you would be all out of luck. Be kind to dumb animals, of course, but don't let your sympathy take the place of your better judgment.

This warning has been sounded by Dr. Roy Norton, Assistant Director of the Division of Preventive Medicine, State Board of Health.

"With the reopening of school," Dr. Norton declared, "it is timely for health officers, nurses, teachers and parents to pass the warning along that, among the early symptoms of rabies in a dog or a cat is the tendency to leave home and wander around looking bedraggled, homeless and in need of sympathy and care.

"Such dogs or cats often go to school grounds," Dr. Norton warned, "and may cause several children to have to take the painful anti-rabic injections. People seem to forget that most dogs and cats will stand a lot of under-feeding, neglect and even mistreatment before leaving home. It is possible, therefore, that any puppy or kitten or grown cat or dog found wandering around is not normal and is likely to be diseased.

"Instead of exhibiting a foolish sentimentalism, offering to handle them or making they playmates of our children, our common sense should make us suspicious and cautious.

"Rabies may be present in a puppy or kitten only six weeks or two months old. A little forethought in this regard may save a great deal of torturing worry, pain and possibly horrible suffering and death," Dr. Norton concluded.
