Poultrymen Cooperate To Conserve Proteins

North Carolina hatcherymen and commercial poultrymen are working closely with State Department and Agricultural Extension officials in the effort to conserve protein feeds and to increase protein production, says T. T. Brown, Poultry Specialist at N. C. State College.

At the recent conference held at Greensboro all worked diligently to find the facts regarding the protein shortage problem and at the same time to protect the health of the broods and flocks. The conference group unanimously agreed that all poultry raisers should be encouraged to utilize green feeds to the fullest to help compensate for the slightly lowered protein levels and to help maintain better health in the poultry flocks. Brown said. It was decided to stress a rigid system of culling in the flocks so that feed consumption could be reduced and efficiently increased.

In line with the needs of conservation, the hatcherymen offered to cooperate by discouraging the sale of chicks intended for laying purposes between the dates of June 1 and September 1. They felt that wartime needs call for emergency measures and they planned to cooperate in every phase of the program for keeping the rapidly expanding poultry industry of the state on a firm and conservative basis.

The hatcherymen decided to hold a two-day educational and business meeting this summer in Raleigh and details of the program will be announced later.

Southern Farm Market Summary

May 22 — Southern fruits and vegetables moved to market in heavier volume during the third week of May, according to a report released by the Food Distribution Administration. The scene of harvest operations is shifting northward as the season progresses, but the bulk of movement is still from Florida, Louisiana, and south Georgia. Ecan movement is at the peak in many localities with considerable diversion to canners. Florida limas, butterbeans, cucumbers, tomatoes, eggplant, and green corn increased. Demand for potatoes was not satisfied despite heavy loading in Florida, Alabama, and Louisiana. Control over shipments from five major producing counties in southern Alabama and western Florida was provided effective May 21 to assist the armed forces to obtain needed supplies. Digging began in the South Carolina area during the week. The first Georgia peaches and Florida watermelons of the season were shipped. Strawberries are moving in moderate amounts from North Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia, and Kentucky.

Shipments continued to compromise the bulk of cattle receipts at the seven southeastern packing plants. Prices were easier with instances another 50c lower. Tennessee and Kentucky markets were barely steady on scant offerings. Soft hog markets in Georgia, Florida, and Alabama held steady, topping at $34.25. Most other markets in the Southern Region closed the week 25c higher with the top prices at Nashville $13.90, Louisville $14.15, Richmond $13.85, and at North Carolina and Virginia cash hog buying stations $13.70-13.90. Spring lambs continued in good demand at steady prices, bringing a top of $16.00 at Nashville and Louisville. Southern egg markets were stronger with receipts ample for trade needs but not burdensome. For Large White Grade A eggs, delivered in Atlanta, producers received 37c; in Raleigh 38c, Richmond 36c, and at Virginia grading stations 34-37c a dozen. Supplies of fryers continued to increase but still brought ceiling prices, which ranged around 28 1-4-29c a pound in Atlanta. Rastill scarce, as producers are holding them for egg production. The situation on corn and feedstuffs showed little change. No corn, either White or Yellow, was offered, and only limited quantities of a few feeds were available. Demand continued far in excess of supplies. Cotton prices advanced nearer to the level established by the CCC sales program. New York July futures closed on Saturday at 20.09c, up 35 points for the week.
