Foreign Aid and Its Effects

An understanding of human nature will tell us that when we stop giving aid to European nations, most of the countries there will be come angry at us. The more aid you give to an individual and the longer you give it, the more disgruntled he becomes when you stop. This seems to be true of nations. Naturally, now that we have hinted at a little less liberality toward Europe, some have yelled "selfish" and "unsympathetic" at us.

The more we give and the longer we give it, the greater will grow this scorn toward the giver. When finally we have to stop the flow of our money toward Europe, anger will be the reaction. That was true after World War I. America had been very liberal, but when aid was halted, up went the tariff barriers. England campaigned: "Buy Within the Empire." Depression followed. What Results?

Following World War II, America again has been extremely liberal. We have spent some 10 billion dollars during each of the past two years. Help we gave to England during the war and since will total nearly 40 billion dollars. We have not been stingy with our food, our goods, nor our dollars, although this drain on our resources has helped to make things tougher for the average American breadwinner. All the Lend-Lease, all the UN-NRA relief, all the goods, all the land is not even on her feet, much less Europe. The crises seem to mount, with England right now facing her greatest crisis since the war. All of these facts must lead us to re-study our aid to Europe and the possible effect of continuing handouts to so many outstretched

Europe's Problem

Obviously, we cannot keep on giving at the rate of 10 billion dollars a year to Europe for the next ten, twenty, or thirty years. Then what can we do? It is plain common sense that the best thing we can do is to help Europe foure out how she can help herself. We must help Europe to get up on her own feet and off the necks of American taxpayers. That is the only kind of ald that will ever be worth much to Europe. The sooner we get Europe to thinking in terms of helping herself, the better it will be for all of us. We might send her food and money till doomsday, but it would only make America poor and would not make Europe rich. Europe must understand that the problem of rehabilitation is her own problem, first of all, and not entirely ours. We must try to re-educate Europe in the principles of American enterprise and initiative. Hard work and self-dependence are among those first

Europe needs production. We can supply machinery on the basis that it may be paid for with goods produced. We can keep down our trade barriers and buy from Europe. Only in that way can those nations get on their feet and buy from us. There are definite ways to help war-torn Europe without imposing the serious injury of continued, outright aid. The sooner our help gets on this basis, the better for everybody.
