Flavor Turn-Abouts Lend

Individuality To Menus

A housewife is something of a creative artist when she dares to tamper with a basic recipe and gives her cooking a personalized air. It's a matter of letting the imagination wander. Changing the flavor of a tried and true dish is the best starting point. One idea leads to another. Here's an example. Take easy-to-prepare corn pudding. Use this recipe or your own favorite recipe. But add Bovril, British beef extract or cubes, to corn pudding and you have created a new dish with the hearty flavor of beef and an extra dividend of nutrition. Bovril can be used in other ways to enhance your menus. Add it to the water in which you cook vegetables or noodles; work it into cheese for an unusually seasoned sandwich spread; use it with gelatine as the base for a summer aspic.

Corn Pudding

2 cubes or 1 tablespoon Bovril 1 teaspoon salt
2 cups corn kernels 1/2 teaspoon pepper
2 eggs 2 cups milk
2 tablespoons drippings

Blend Bovril dissolved in 1/4 cup boiling water, corn, drippings and milk. Pour in beaten eggs; add salt and pepper and mix. Pour into individual buttered baking dishes or casseroles. Bake in moderate oven (350° F.) for one hour till done. Serves 4.

ADVICE TO HEROINES

A heroine must shrink and cling when heroes are about. And thus the watching world will think: "How brave his heart and stout." But if he chance to be away When bright-faced dangers shine, It will be best for her to play The oak-tree, not the vine. In fact the most important thing is knowing when it's time to cling.

Sign Of Spring

Spring is definitely in the air—not only here but all around the place. All over the country students have been engaging in riots, party raids, and just general hell-raising. The way college boys have done since they first went to college. It is part of the restlessness of youth. It started several weeks ago with a student fight at Harvard and occurred almost spontaneously later at Yale when two rival ice cream vendors got into an argument over a parking place. A crowd gathered and before long some 1,200 students were throwing pillow feathers and water bombs. The New Haven police chief called out the riot squad, who finally restored order, and drove the students inside the gates of the old college. Town police do not enter these hotly-contested grounds which are patrolled by Yale cops.

At Harvard the argument started after Harvard's frog for President movement. And then it spread like wild fire all over the campuses of the nation—usually those in which there were co-eds. More than 1,000 students at Columbia staged a raid on the girls' dormitories at Barnard. Police kept the boys out but the girls tossed out their lingerie to the boys anyway—and from New York the movement went west to Iowa, South to Miami, and found its way back again this week at Maryland and at Wake Forest.

Very little damage was done to property. The presidents and the presiding authorities are a little worried not knowing just what will happen next—but such pranks were played in my day—and long before. Life says that an Iowa psychiatrist offered the most sensible analysis. "It's kind of relaxing to let down and give way to impulses after a long, hard winter. It's spring—and besides it's fun." and that is always reason enough for youth.

The Latest Decalogue

Too many of us are inclined to obey the exact letter of the law, but not the spirit behind it. We are taught that we may not kill, but we have no compunction about the methods we use in dealing with our competitors. We should remember that the eleventh commandment that Christ gave to us is the greatest commandment—that we love our neighbors as we do ourselves. Arthur Hugh Clough points out in his well known poem how many so-called Christians obey the words of the law, and completely miss the way of salvation—kindness and consideration and love for our fellow man. Thou shalt have one God only; who would be at the expense of two? No graven images may be worshipped, except the currency; Swear not at all; for, for thy curse Thine enemy is none the worse; At church on Sunday to attend Will serve to keep the world thy friend; Honour thy parents; that is, all From whom advancement may befall; Thou shalt not kill; but need'st not strive Officially to keep alive; Do not adultery commit; Advantage rarely comes of it; Thou shalt not steal; an empty feat

Good Friends And Kind Neighbors

Mr. B. F. Baker and his family have good reason to know how wonderful are good friends and neighbors. During the long illness of his late wife, and after her death, these neighbors not only ironed and often the cooking, they also helped with his crops. Only last Saturday, ten of these neighbors came by and completely reset his tobacco. It gives us a warm feeling in our hearts to know that there are still such people left in this world.
