When we have a really great task before us, like living our lives or starting a forward-moving program by consolidating colleges, it is important that we begin with a good philosophy. Anything which involves long years and builds step by step for the future should be begun with care and thoughtfulness. The future is filled with unknowns. We cannot possibly tell in advance every stage in the journey. We should learn all we can from the experience of others. We should plan carefully in advance so far as we are able to foresee, but after we have done all that, we still are

...the way is not unknown to God. He governs the future as well as the present and the past. We know something of His laws, laws of nature, laws of human behavior, moral and spiritual laws. Our wisdom is to put our faith in Him and start out in conformity with His laws. We will be all right, all the way down the unknown paths of the future, if we are "walking hand in hand with Our Heavenly Father."

A long time ago the writer of Proverbs said, "Trust in the Lord with all your heart, and do not rely on your own insight. In all your ways acknowledge Him, and He will make straight your paths. Be not wise in your own eyes; Fear the Lord, and turn away from evil." (Proverbs 3:5-7).

Many of us are interested in building the educational program and the new campus of the consolidated Presbyterian college. I would like to suggest a philosophy.

Soil Bank Payments Are To Be Filed As Net Income For Social Security

Payments of two types to farmers under the soil bank crop reduction plans are counted as net earnings in computing earnings for social security insurance benefit payments, and payments of a third type may be counted under certain conditions.

The soil bank payments to be counted as net earnings by self-employed farm operators are those made under the "acreage reserves" program and the annual payments of a third type of soil bank payment is the conservation - reserves reimbursement payment. These are payments made by the Federal Government to pay part of the cost of carrying out the conservation practices and making improvements on the conservation reserve. They are included in figuring the farmer's net earnings only if the expenditures are deductible as business expenses for income purposes.

A landlord who owns a farm and participates materially in the production or management of production of farm commodities gets social security credit for his share of the soil bank payments just as the farm operator does.

For a farm owner who receives rental income but who takes no part in the actual operation of the farm, neither the soil bank payments nor the rental income counts toward social security benefits.

Farmers who draw soil bank payments are subject to self-employment (Social Security) taxes as on other net earnings, and these earnings count toward social security retirement, disability, and survivors insurance benefits.

A large number of elderly N. C. farmers are retiring each week under the old-age and survivors insurance program provided by the Social Security Act. The amount of the monthly payment is based on the farmer's average earnings.

The minimum monthly payment is $56 for the farmer and $15 for his wife, if they are both 65. Maximum for which the self-employed farmer can qualify is $10.50 a month for himself and $4.50 for his wife.

Preparations For Water Problems Study And Inventory Now Underway; Is Needed

The North Carolina Board of Water Commissioners, backed by the 16-member advisory committee and representatives of a dozen state-wide organizations, will launch its grass roots inventory of the state's water problems in the near future.

The Board gave the green light to the project this past week at its quarterly meeting and two committees tackled details of the program immediately.

General J. B. Townsend of Greensboro, chairman of the board, said the actual county by county inventory will begin as soon as the necessary preparations can be made.

"As inventory," Townsend said, "coupled with studies we are making regarding water resources and water use will give us the most comprehensive picture ever compiled relative to water conditions in North Carolina. It will provide us with a major stepping stone in developing a realistic water conservation plan for the state."

Townsend explained that "When this inventory is completed we will know how much water is available in North Carolina, how that water is being used and what problems now exist of may develop in the future relative to that use."

"Our Board will compare the existing and anticipated problems with the state's present water laws. Statutes now in effect will undoubtedly cover many of the problems adequately. In other instances, especially in connection with anticipated problems, we expect to find that present laws are partially or totally inadequate."

"The members of our Board," the chairman continued, "feel that these growing problems which defy existing regulations pose a serious threat to future economic development. We intend, therefore, to study these problems thoroughly and to propose what we consider effective solutions. Our recommendations will then be carried before the people in a state-wide series of public hearings, giving the water users an opportunity to compare their problems with the Board's suggested solutions."

"After these hearings have been concluded, we will re-evaluate our recommendations and make reasonable changes in accordance with the views expressed by the public. The recommendations will then be turned over to the General Assembly for appropriate action."

Townsend concluded the explanation of his Board's plan with a statement of appreciation to the various individuals and organizations who have joined the state agency in promoting the inventory program.

Among those assisting the Board and its advisory committee in planning the inventory are, W. H. Rogers, Jr., chief engineer for the Highway Commission; Wayne A. Corning, vice president of the Wachovia Bank and Trust Co., Winston Salem; A. C. Lawrence, Apex, chairman of the Agricultural Policy Committee of the State Game Warden; H. Rogers, Greensboro, representing the Farm Bureau Federation; B. L. Angell, Winston-Salem, president of the N. C. Association of Soil Conservation District Supervisors; and J. W. Evans, Durham, vice-president of the N. C. Vocational Agricultural Teachers Association.

Highest Command

Lesson for March 17, 1957

WE ALL live by authority of some kind. When some one says, "Do this!" we do it—willingly or unwillingly, but we do it if we can. If a man says, "I wear no man's collar, I do as I please, I am my own authority," a close observer can often perceive that the man is fooling himself. He may have certain habits, certain appetites. He may be one whom Dorothy Parker describes: "Some men cannot pass a bookstore." It may be books, or liquor, or fishing tackle, or women—something says with compelling voice to this boastful man, "Come!" and he loses no time coming. Sometimes the man who brags most of his own freedom is the man who is the most willing slave.

Who Is in Charge Here?

Consider some of the many bosses of the human race. One authority whose voice is loud in the land is the "Voice of the People." Some politicians live by it. A politician will split the weak in telling the world what a low-grade rat his opponent is; but then the opponent beats him in the primary, and the politician sings another tune. "The people have spoken," he says; and turns around to support the very man who he had just been saying was hardly fit to be dogcatcher. Others again regard the law as the highest command. In their eyes, law can turn right into wrong or wrong into right. But the law is a human thing; any good lawyer will admit that there is a gap between what the law commands or permits, and what is morally right. Law tries to catch up with morals; it never creates right or wrong.

Money Talks

Others again find their highest authority in money. Some will admit it, some will not. But whenever you find a person making all his decisions in the light of the one question: "What will make the most money?" Or, "What will cost the least?" then you know that for that person the last word is with the cash account. One form of this authority is Business. If it's good for Business it's good for the country. In the name of this authority many practices are advocated which are definitely not good for the people who make up the country. For many other persons, the highest command is the voice of the one who is most loved. In times gone by, it might be the King's Favorite. In our more democratic era, individual citizens may take their wife's or husband's word as the last word. Or—to take one more type, for a vast number of persons the highest authority is their Church. Some people even think the church cannot make a mistake!

Jesus, Lord of All

For the Christian, however, his highest command is that of Jesus Christ. The vows taken when a person is confirmed, or joins the church, profess, sometimes in these very words, "I take Jesus Christ for my Lord and Savior." "For my Lord..." If the word means what it was intended to mean, it means that above all other authorities is His. All these other commands have their places; but His is supreme. In a great corporation there are many persons with authority; but only one President. No decision at lower levels is valid if it conflicts with a policy the President has laid down. So there are situations where the money question is decisive. There are other situations in which a political party's decision, state or platform may be decisive for the party worker, — and so on. But if decisions on these lower levels come into conflict with what we may call the policy of Jesus, then those lower decisions must give way. In Jesus' lifetime He challenged every authority that confronted Him. He was responsive to authority within proper bounds (as when He paid taxes or when placed on oath in a trial) but even over the church, even over the inspired Law. He claimed first right. The sensible Christian does not claim for Jesus what He did not set up to be an authority on forms of government, financial affairs or farming. But He did lay down certain great principles founded in the will and nature of the heavenly Father.

Soil Bank Acres Must Be Observed By Farmers

Some farmers are forgetting that the chief aim of the Acreage Reserve Program is to reduce production of allotted crops in over supply, declares Horace D. Godfrey, North Carolina ASAC Administrative Officer.

According to Godfrey, some farmers in commercial corn counties thought they were entitled to place their entire corn allotment in the reserve and then plant all the corn they wanted for feeding livestock on the farm.

Godfrey emphasizes that a farmer will be ineligible to participate in either phase of the Soil Bank Program if the planted acreage of any allotment crop produced on the farm exceeds the farm allotment. Wheat and peanuts are exceptions to this requirement he says.

The fact that a farmer plants within his allotment is not enough. According to Godfrey, the farmer will also be required to reduce his plantings of the allotment crop being placed in the reserve by the same number of acres placed in the reserve.
