Gail Newton Will Serve Trade Fair

North Carolina's reigning beauty Susan Kay Woodall of Roanoke Rapids, will join a bevy of the state's loveliest girls - more than 50 in all - at the North Carolina Trade Fair in Charlotte, October 12-21.

Emmalee Gaddy, the International Tobacco Queen; Alaid of Coon, Carl Ann Williams; and North Carolina's Dairy Princess, Barbara Agnes Morgan, will all be on hand during the opening days of the Mammoth trade event, where they will join a corps of 50 other beauties, participants in the recent Miss North Carolina Pageant, who will represent the State and their home communities as official Trade Fair hostesses.

Costumed in identical outfits - a dark brown Fall cotton frock with beige beret and gloves - the official hostesses will serve for two days each, with a group of ten girls on duty each day of the Fair. A floral identification badge will complete the outfit of each girl, so that she may be easily recognized by visitors from abroad.

The appearance of Miss North Carolina, as well as participation of the 50 local beauty queens as hostesses, is sponsored by the North Carolina Jaycees. Housing and chaperonage at the time of the Trade Fair is being arranged by the Charlotte Jaycees.

Gail Newton Miss Raleigh will be one of the hostesses.
