Boy Scout Themes For Next 3 Mos.
 Preparations, wildlife conservation and Scout skills will highlight the activities of the 10 Boy Scout Troops of the Tuscarora Council, Boy Scouts of America, for the next few months. It was announced by George Finch of Wallace, N. C., Council Commissioner.
 Mr. Finch explained that while most troops are active in the Council's upcoming major activities such as the Roundup and the winter conservation campaign, they also have special themes each month.
 During Nov. troops will upgrade helping others, and will focus on the skills needed to be helpful. Many troops will set up mobilization plans of the type known as "active in flood, hurricane and other disaster areas. Emergency skills such as first aid will be taught and practiced.
 Mr. Finch described the theme for the month of "A Helping Hand for Wildlife" as "a happy combination of two important parts of Boy Scouting - the Out-of-Doors and the Good Turn." Among the troop projects to help wildlife had winter food and shelter are birdfeeding and animal feeding.
 "Who with Skill" will be the January theme. Troops will be holding contests among their patrols as they concentrate on sharpening a variety of Scout skills including fire making and fire prevention, first aid, knots and lashings, distance judging and woods lore.
 Mr. Finch pointed out that most troops in the area served by the Tuscarora Council will welcome visitors during this active period as part of the Councilwide Fall Roundup, enabling parents and boys interested in Scouting to visit nearby units and select one to join. "It's a great time for a boy to get in on the fun of Scouting," he said, "since he'll be able to learn and grow with his new troop through the year and be prepared as a Scout for next summer's camping."
