CP & L Disaster Plan Poised For Action

Engineers with Carolina Power & Light Company are poised to counter hurricane havoc which could come along the Coastal Carolinas.

Edgar M. Geddie, superintendent of lines and coordinator of the disaster plan, calls it a "stitch in time" routine borne of experience gained in past emergencies. Its purpose: restore service in the shortest possible time. Its logistics resemble a well-directed military operation.

Jimmy Jones of New Bern acted as emcee.

Miss Magnolia for 1962 was chosen from a group of seven girls. Linda Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Smith was the winner, with Ellen Rouse in second place and Ellen Wilkins third.

Carol Ann Tucker, Hilda Halberg, Linda Smith and Annette Cavensugh did a dance routine.

Carol Ann Tucker and Doug Smith each did a pantomime.

There was a male leg contest in which J. P. Smith won first place and Charlie Thomas second.

The henpecked husband contest was won by Melvin Pope.

Mrsy Ann Martino, Annette Cavensugh and Carol Ann Tucker sang, with Linda Smith at the piano.

Jimmy Jones sang, played his rumpet, and did monologues.

Proceeds for the evening went to the Community Building fund.

Mrs. Smith Canasta Hostess

Mrs. Abbie Smith was hostess to her Canasta Club last Tuesday night.

Those playing were Mesdames Jerry Smith, J. L. Lanier, C. L. Quina, Melvin Pope, Wendell Evans, William Potter, Joe Newkirk, Earl Baker, Hugh Sanderson, McDonald Beasley, Worth Potter and Abbie Smith.

High score was made by Mrs. William Potter; she was awarded a prize of stationery and an address book.

The hostess served 7Up float and cookies.

When adverse weather threatens the CP&L system, department lines dissolve and all hands except essential operators turn to the task at hand. As coordinator, Geddie is in command and it is not unusual for ranking officers to step into the breach.

The company's five division line superintendents, at Raleigh, Wilmington, Southern Pines, Asheville and Florence, S. C., are division coordinators. Under them are area coordinators - managers, line foremen or engineers - in charge of setting the plan into motion on the local level.

This maneuver requires planning. Division and area coordinators have already held skull drills in advance of the hurricane season. Each storm teaches CP&L something new, and the disaster plan is refined and improved each year.

Not confined to hurricanes, the same procedure goes into motion when trouble results from ice storms, snow or severe thunderstorms.

In the hurricane-prone Wilmington District, area coordinators are spotted at Wilmington, Whiteville, Elizabethtown, Wallace, New Bern, Jacksonville, Kinston and Morehead City, points where radio base stations assure ready communications. Their division Method Substation in Raleigh coordinator is T. H. Mickey Hall, division line superintendent at Wilmington.

Every office in the region is a command post, with all personnel assigned specific emergency duties. Clerks man telephones to take and process calls from customers; home service representatives and secretaries commandeer coffee pots and prepare sandwiches for hungry, weary crewmen salesmen act as couriers, guides and scouts.

Fine details are covered well in advance. Gasoline stations with gravity flow pumps are spotted. Distributors of dry ice are lined up for quick call; materials are stockpiled and inventoried; "priority customers" like hospitals and water plants are alerted to possible power interruption; places of lodging are reserved for a possible influx of extra crews.

Crews are directed in advance to areas where service facilities are apt to be cut off by high water. This is a lesson learned in 1960 from Hurricane Donna which completely isolated some points in the Morehead City-New Headquarters for the fight against the pest is the N. C. Department of Agriculture's Border Belt Tobacco Research Station at Whiteville. Field experiments are conducted on a 55-acre farm near Evergreen and a 92-acre farm near Dillon, S. C.

In truth, people can generally make time for what they choose to do; it is not really the time but the will that is lacking.

Where People Are More

"WHO OWNS CP&L?"

Many of our customers think the city, or the state, owns and runs this company.

They are glad to learn that it just isn't so. For CP&L is owned and run by people, just like any other investor-owned business.

A lot of the people who own this business are also its customers. Naturally, they demand that CP&L be run efficiently, made to grow—and that electric service continue to be brought to them and to you efficiently and economically.

That's one reason you can continue to expect good service from CP&L even though electricity is delivered to you at bargain price.
