Early Book Art To Be Exhibited At Wilmington

A collection of early book art, a traveling exhibition on loan from the North Carolina Museum of Art in Raleigh, is currently on display at St. John's Art Gallery, Wilmington, N. C.

The exhibition will be on view through October 23, 1962.

The collection contains 28 book leaves, all from the 15th and 16th centuries. Thirteen are vellum sheets from hand-written and hand-illuminated manuscripts, with one of these a calendar page from a Book of Hours, estimated to date to 1450.

The remaining leaves are early printed pages, embellished with woodcuts, except for two early Bible pages that display only hand-illuminated initials. Pictures of woodcut pages come from

Home Economics Projects Attract Large Segment Of 4-H Membership

Cauling was the first 4-H project for girls about 50 years ago and came under the heading of "home economics." Cooking and sewing were soon added. Today about 1 1/2 million girls between 10 and 21 years old are engaged in a broad program of home economics projects.

They not only learn many skills for building happy homes, but also acquire important knowledge and experience to guide them into future careers and successful marriages.

In 1962, with the approval of the Cooperative Extension Service, a specific awards program that encompasses all 4-H home economics projects was set up. The sponsor was Montgomery Ward, which already had been an active supporter of 4-H youths for a decade.

Since that time national recognition has touched 153 young women because they were selected as the most outstanding members completing home economics projects. Their reward was a college scholarship provided by the mail order firm.

Soon another batch of home economics scholarship winners will be named by the Extension Service. In November, six girls will be chosen from among all 1962 state award winners who will meet at the National 4-H Club Congress opening in Chicago, Nov. 25. The girls' trips will be paid for by Montgomery Ward and they will be guests at a banquet in their honor.

And what lies ahead for these talented young women?

Miss Margarite McNally, of the National 4-H Service Committee, says the answer may be found in the results of a recent survey of recipients spanning a 25-year period. Of the 110 respondents, 78 per cent had attended college. About 85 per cent of this group pursued home economics careers in the following areas: teaching, dietetics, nursing, Extension Service, library, social work and business.

A review of additional jobs awaiting future home economics graduates suggests journalism, advertising and sales, textile and clothing design, research, interior decorating, and the vast field of human and animal nutrition including outer space travelers.

The National 4-H Home Economics program has much to offer the preteen member as well as the older girl. Younger 4-Hers often start out by discovering what are the basic four foods groups, and applying this new knowledge to meal preparation at home. Or they may enroll in a clothing project which teaches beginning sewing techniques.

And there is virtually no limit to what the older club member can do. Accomplishments over a period of years are staggering. For example, some have become so expert in clothing that they have made complete wardrobes and modeled their garments in statewide revues. Others have distinguished themselves in the culinary arts by preparing thousands of meals and preserving tons of food.

Junior leadership activities have occupied the older members along with baking and cooking, health and grooming, safety, home management and child care.

State-Wide Church Bldg. Conference Kinston, Friday

The problem of building to meet the challenge of population explosion will be discussed at the state-wide Church Building Conference to be held in Spilman Baptist Church, Kinston, October 5, 1962 from 9:30 A. M. to 4:00 P. M.

Dr. Rowland E. Crowder, Consultant in the Church Architecture Department of the Baptist Sunday School Board in Nashville, Tennessee, will show how the church decides the size and arrangement of the building.

Paul Johnson, a graduate of the University of Virginia and Church Architect with the Church Architecture Department of the Baptist Sunday School Board, Nashville, Tennessee, will discuss the latest materials and designs of church buildings.

North Carolina Baptist churches surpassed all previous records last year in expending $14,208,079 on remodeling and constructing new buildings. This is the largest single item of expenditures among Baptists, and yet the churches are not building fast enough. The new educational buildings are usually filled to the average attendance saturation point of the building within a few months after completion.

It is expected that by 1970 more babies will have been born than the present total membership of the ten leading denominations in America. All denominations must step up gains during the next ten years or there will be 12,000,000 more unchurched than that at the present. This gigantic task cannot be done in our present facilities.
