Qualified Students Can Still Get Into A College Or University

Greensboro, N. C. — "A qualified student still can get into a college or university," said Allen E. Kivett, director of admissions at Greensboro College. Kivett said that when people look below the surface, the so-called shortage of space in college is not as critical as it might appear. "In many cases," he emphasized, "students must be willing to accept a school other than their original choice."

Greensboro College, in a recent report by the Associated Press, was named as the only exception in North Carolina to the crowded situation. Kivett told the wire service, when asked, that GC has 40 spaces for male students. During the two days after the article appeared, he received queries from more than 40 interested young men. "A few of these," he said, "may qualify for admission to GC."

At Greensboro the admissions committee places weight on the predicted grade point average for entering freshmen. This average indicates the probable level of academic achievement and is based on College Entrance Examination Board (CEEB) test scores given and on the student's high school academic record. The high school record is the most important, according to Kivett.

The only other college of relative size in North Carolina that uses the grade point average system is Davidson College. In using the grade point predictions, GC is trying to match the quality of male students with that of incoming women students. Of the female students entering this year, 53 per cent come from the top 20 per cent of their graduating classes. Ten of these were valedictorians. Against such competition, the male student whose grade point prediction is not high enough cannot be expected to survive academically.

"Qualifications for different schools vary," Kivett said. "The level of difficulty in the classroom also varies from school to school," he added, "and since Greensboro College places a primary emphasis on good classroom teaching and high standards, this means that it is one of the contributing factors as far as our present shortage is concerned."

So far this year, GC has received many more applications than a year ago. Of a total of some 700 freshmen and transfer applications, 368 were accepted and could be admitted if they chose to come to Greensboro. Only 230 actually will arrive on the GC campus in September when the college opens its fall semester. There were 168 male applications of which 39 per cent were accepted.

Most of the high school students who applied were making multiple applications to see which colleges would admit them. This is a common practice, said Kivett, and directors of admissions take it into consideration when estimating probable enrollment. "To compare the total number of applications at all colleges with the number of men and women finally admitted gives a dark and altogether false picture of the actual situation," he said. "We feel sure," he added, "that the 138 who were accepted at GC but did not come will appear at other schools in the fall."

The female enrollment at Greensboro was filled early in the spring and many still are on the waiting list and will be notified of their acceptance should vacancies occur before September.

Since becoming educational in 1954, GC has steadily increased its male enrollment. Dean Elmer L. Puryear, in appraising the situation said that the men have taken prominent positions of leadership on the campus. "More important," he said, "they are proving themselves equal to the standards that we are committed to maintain in the classroom." He pointed to the fact that GC is in the process of raising the money to build another classroom building which will give the liberal arts college the classroom space and facilities it needs. "We also have one of the finest faculties that can be employed and are expanding it steadily," he said.

The college board of trustees, heading by J. C. Cowan, Jr., of Burlington Industries, is aware of the growth trend of male students. Their concern is to fill the existing vacancies as soon as possible, but not at the expense of the quality of education which is being maintained.

In his report to the board of trustees in April, president J. Ralph Jolly presented a ten-year program for the development of the institution. In the resume of the program, it was stated that the 127-year-old college "will remain a small, church-related college with a total enrollment of about 750. It is expected that at the end of ten years the student body will be equally divided between men and women and that both groups will be well qualified to do superior college work."

Director of admissions Kivett is not discouraged by the number of recent phone calls. "I hope," he said, "that those who call remember that GC still has these vacancies because it is trying to hold to its standards as a good school. There are two things to keep in mind," he added. "We accept qualified students when they apply rather than at some set date in the summer, and we accept many so-called average students if they have the proper motivation and give some indication that they may succeed academically at Greensboro College."

When you go to work on that summer job, show your social security account number card to your employer. Make sure he copies your name and social security number exactly as it appears on your card. Keep your social security account straight.

North Carolina July Slaughter Shows Decrease

Commercial slaughter of livestock in North Carolina during July reached 35,701,000 pounds live weight for the month, down 398,000 pounds from the record July high butchered in 1964, according to the North Carolina Crop

Reporting Service. The output was down from the June slaughter by 865,000 pounds. Comparing July slaughter this year with that of last year, the live weight in lbs. butchered by species (last years in parenthesis) was as follows: cattle 14,507,000 (13,877,000), calves 833,900 (633,000) hogs 20,350,000 (21,548,000) and sheep and lambs 10,000 (11,000). Total slaughter for the first seven months of this year amounting to 26,188,000 pounds was two percent less than for the same period last year.

Corn Muffin Sandwich

A relaxed evening of television or reading calls for a supper that's quick and simple. Men especially will "take" to this Corn Muffin Sandwich, hearty with baked ham, red apple and cheese. A mustard-horseradish spread adds zip.

The crisp, golden "bread" slices for this sandwich are halves of large round corn muffins. Bake the muffin batter in five-inch glass dishes or, if you prefer, in a square baking pan.

The corn muffins are tasty contributors of six important nutrients — thiamine, niacin, riboflavin, iron, calcium and protein — thanks to the enriched self-rising corn meal used in their preparation. The incorporation of baking powder and salt into self-rising corn meal speeds preparation, too, by eliminating measuring steps.

- CORN MUFFIN SANDWICH
3 or 4 servings
- 8 Corn Meal Muffins or 8 Corn Bread Squares
 - 1/2 cup butter or margarine, softened
 - 4 teaspoons prepared horseradish
 - 4 teaspoons prepared mustard
 - 8 or 9 slices cooked ham
 - 2 unpeeled red apples, cored, and thinly sliced
 - 2 slices (1 oz. each) Cheddar cheese

Bake Corn Muffins or Corn Bread Squares; then preheat broiler. Set out baking sheet. Blend butter or margarine, horseradish and mustard. Slice muffins or squares crosswise in half. Spread with butter mixture and place on baking sheet. Cover bottoms with ham, apples and cheese. Broil tops and bottoms just until cheese melts. Serve immediately, open-faced.

Corn Meal Muffins or Corn Bread Squares
Grease eight 5-inch baking dishes or a 9-inch square pan. Preheat oven to 425°. Combine 2 1/2 cups enriched self-rising corn meal, 2 tablespoons sugar and 1 tablespoon dried shredded green onions. Blend 2 beaten eggs, 1 1/4 cups milk and 1/2 cup melted shortening or oil. Add all at once to corn meal and mix until well blended. If necessary, add up to 1/2 cup more milk to make medium-thick batter. Fill baking dishes or pan. Bake 25 to 30 minutes or until browned.

THEY DO
The advertising salesman for the local newspaper called on the village grocer to try and sell him an ad.
"Don't want any," replied the gray-haired grocer, "never advertised since I started this store forty years ago, and I ain't gonna start now."
The salesman looked out the window and pointed to the church down the street. "How long has that old church been there?" he asked.
"About a hundred and fifty years," was the reply.
"Well," said the salesman, "they still ring the bell, don't they?"
In our church none of the beams have ever fallen on a worshiper during Sunday service.
