

SIGNS OF FALL: One sign of fall is children going back to school. Other signs remind motorists that they are near a school. "Watch for the children and obey the sign," urges Carol Lane, women's travel director of Shell Oil Company, who devotes much of her work to traffic safety. "Help make the season safe for children."

Senator Jordan Reports

By Sen. B. Everett Jordan
 WASHINGTON—It appears that Congress will be able to adjourn by the end of September, now that decisions have been made not to bring up for action three highly controversial legislative proposals.

The proposals which have been set aside until the next session of the Congress are measures that would increase minimum wages and expand coverage of the wage and hour law, federalize the state unemployment compensation programs, and re-align Congressional districts.

These three proposals are not only highly controversial, but attempts to get action on them this year would cause long delays in ending the current session of the Congress. Of the remaining issues to be settled during this session of the Congress, the most far-reaching one is that concerning Section 14 (b) of the Taft-Hartley Act.

This section of the Taft-Hartley Act legalizes the various right-to-work laws that are now in effect in 19 of the 50 States.

If efforts to repeal this section of the law are successful, it would mean that the right-to-work laws now in effect, including the law we have in North Carolina, would be nullified.

Earlier this year, the House of Representatives voted to repeal Section 14 (b), and it appears that the battle over the issue in the Senate will be hard and close.

I have had a great deal of mail on this subject during the current session, most of it in opposition to repeal.

I have always been a strong supporter of right-to-work laws, and I certainly plan to do everything I can to preserve them in the future.

Another extremely important question facing Congress is farm legislation, which includes the cotton program. The one-price cotton program, which means so much in our efforts to increase the use of cotton and thereby help keep the textile industry going at full capacity, expires next year.

We are making every effort to have the one-price cotton principle preserved in the omnibus farm bill which is scheduled to be acted on by the Senate during the next week.

In Memory

In memory of Mamie Vetra Cope, September 9th, 1965, who departed this life just one year ago today, God's Death Angel came and carried her away, while I kneel and pray her passing was not in vain. O Mystic Love of God sublime, help us to meet again, Dear One, it seems for long ages you have been gone, yet your loving influence will be forever living on in humbleness I submit to my Lord and Saviour's will, you leave a vacant place in my heart never can be refilled.

—by her husband,
 Kelly L. Cope.

"GOD IS WITH THOSE WHO PERSIST." - Koran Ch. 8

Little Sarah had been naughty and her mother suggested that she mention the matter in her prayers. This is what her mother heard her say before she went to sleep:

"Dear Lord, I know I am a bad little girl and I do wish you would help me be better, and if at first you don't succeed, try, try again."

There are two ways to persevere. One is to keep on keeping on. We have remarked about the winning ways of bull-headed determination that often out-last ability that is faint-hearted.

The other way of persevering is more intelligent and, probably, of more lasting effect. That form of perseverance is to begin again. When you are blocked in a sincere endeavor, don't bat your head against a stone wall. Don't quit, either. Draw back. Look the situation over. Then begin again. You may be able to shift your attack without changing your purpose. Beginning again shows as much perseverance as blind hammering and more intelligence. The new beginning may achieve what you want and last longer than gains won by brute force that calls for retaliation. By all means, persevere, but do it intelligently. Keep beginning again.

QUICKER ROUTE

A drunk was last seen ambling up to a subway excavation in New York City. He leaned over the rail and shouted down to the workmen: "Fay, how longzit gonna take to finish it?"

"Two years, bud," someone yelled back up.

"Two yearsh!" the drunk cried. "Sh-too long—I'll take a cab."

Liability Insurance Tightened

North Carolina motorists will find that liability insurance requirements have been tightened under a new law passed by the 1965 Legislature which became effective August 17.

The new law requires insurance companies to report immediately to the Department of Motor Vehicles when liability insurance ends for any reason. If the policy is being cancelled by the insurance company, notice to the department must be 15 days in advance of the termination date.

Upon receipt of the termination notice, the Department of Motor Vehicles is required by the new law to notify the owner, and the owner to retain his license plate is required to recertify to having other liability insurance coverage effective on the termination date of the prior coverage.

Failure to recertify within 15 days is by law prima facie evidence that no financial responsibility exists, the vehicles agency explained. Penalty for failure to have insurance, or failure to recertify to having insurance, is revocation of license plate and driver's license for 30 days.

Motor Vehicles Commissioner Edward Scheidt said the department began sending out on August 17th the required insurance termination notices along with form FR-3, a certificate for making the recertification.

 He cautioned motor vehicle owners against any lapse in liability insurance coverage. "Make certain you have liability insurance and that it is maintained continuously or surrender your plate before insurance ends," Scheidt said. "You will then have complied with the law and at the same time will have protected your driving privileges."
