IN LITTLE BETHLEHEM

From all the fair Judean fields
The sun withdrew her light,
And sent the evening shadows o'er,
Which deepened into night,
Where shepherds kept their flocks of sheep
Beside the rippling rills,
And led them into pastures green
Through valleys and o'er hills.

When everything in stillness lay,
And scarce a sound was heard,
Our Father sent the angels down
To bring to them the word
That Jesus Christ, our blessed Lord,—
God's precious Diadem,—
Was born the Saviour of the world
In little Bethlehem.

In swaddling clothes He lay that night,
Cradled in a manger,
And although promised to the world,
Yet to the world a stranger,
And Joseph watched beside His bed
While others soundly slept,
And Mary, mother Mary, too,
Her vigils o'er Him kept.

The angels sang, O sweetly sang,
In melody and mirth,
Out in the fields that blessed night:
"Good will toward man on earth!"
The shepherds heard this sacred song
From Heaven's holy band,
As in the stillness of the night
It floated o'er the land.

And soon they hastened to the town,
The town of Bethlehem,
To find the holy little Babe
God promised unto them
As Saviour and Redeemer true—
The fair EMMANUEL—
To make salvation's only plan
To save the world from hell.

When they had found and worshipped Him
They happily returned
To tell the good news unto men
From hearts that in them burned,
And soon the good news spread abroad—
O, the wondrous story!—
That in the town of Bethlehem
Was born the "King of Glory!"
