Schools Get Approval On New Project

Davie County Schools received notice of approval of project submitted under Title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act. The project was entitled "An Instructional Improvement Program for the Economically and Educationally Deprived He now uses the revolution-Children of the Davie Counary tires on his personal car.

The project request for $84, 385.07 has been funded and will be used to provide addi-tional personnel, increase instructional supplies, and se-cure more audio-visual equipment and materials for schools qualifying under this Title.

Federal guidelines required that schools be qualified on the basis of both number and percentage of economically deprived children attending the school, Schools qualified under this project are: Cen-tral Davie Elementary, Cooleemee, North Cooleemee, Farmington, Mocksville, and William R. Davie.

Upon notification of approval of the project, Superintendent James E. Everidge com-mented: "The approval of this project will mean a tremen lous boost to our elementary school programs. It will pro-vide us with much - needed personnel, equipment, and materials. As an example we can now increase our supply of educational films for these students from 7 to 200. We can provide some secretarial assistance and teacher aides for our elementary schools".

"The formulation and comof this project has board of trustees of the Dabeen a laborious task, and I vie County Hospital. He sucwould personally like to thank

This is an increase from the $125 million estimated earlier. "The exact total will depend upon such factors as machinery deliverges and completion time. for ies and completion time- for construction projects," he added. The projected increase in capital investment does not represent any single major project, Mr. Myers said, but is spread among a number of modernization and expansion programs. "We have increased our productive facilities through internal capital capital s, mostly projects for many years, me by the expansion of existing plants," he stated. Our current capital program includes seven new plants — more than have ever been under construction at one time in the Company's history. Technolo-gical developments have made entirely new plants more feasible than adding to exist ing plants in many instance. Also, we have reached the optimum size in some of our present manufacturing opera tions, and in other cases availability of labor, utilities and other essentials require the location of plants in new

Mr. Myers pointed out that defense business accounted for slightly less than 3% of the Company's first quarter sales on an overall basis, since a large percentage of Burling-ton's diversified production is in products which have no military application.

"Those areas which do make such products are cooperating fully with the defense supply agencies," he said. "It is anticipated that our government business for the full fiscal year total volume."

"Assuming reasonable flexibility in fabric specification, ments of the industry and based on information currently available, it is our belief that defense requirements for textiles can be met by the industry without any significant interference with civilian deliveries.
