WHAT BEAUTY — In the saddle and under. This was the first class that commenced the Oak Ridge Horse Show. This was the Best Parade Horse and what could be more appropriate to commence such a great Horse Show as was put on at Oak Ridge.

DOES IT RUN? — You bet it runs, and a lot better than some of the new ones that are on the market. This outstanding car was the winner of the antique car class in the parade held at the Oak Ridge Horse Show held Easter Monday at Oak Ridge, North Carolina.

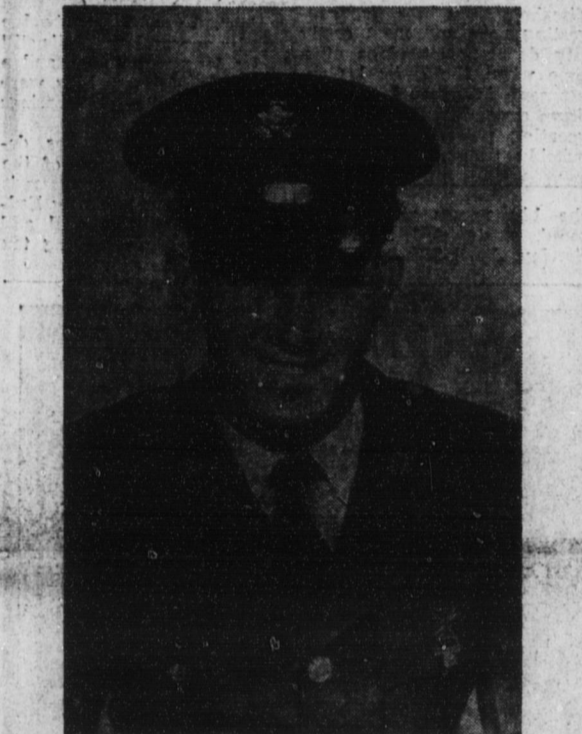

REMEMBER THE GOOD OLD DAYS—Some of you older people think back to the band wagon days and you should seem right at home in this scene. This is Mr. Idol's Horse drawn band wagon that won first place in none other than the best horse drawn rig.

Davie Clergymen Have Important Decision To Make

"Many local clergymen have an important decision to make by April 15," Robert C. Thomas, social security district manager in Winston-Salem, said today.

The 1965 amendments to the social security law gave clergymen who had missed out on previous opportunities to sign up for social security coverage another chance to elect this protection. Now this latest "open season" provided by law is about to run out, he said.

Mr. Thomas explained that clergymen are the only occupational group who must decide on their own whether they want their earnings to be subject to social security in order to get protection for themselves and their families against the risks of death, disability, and low incomes and illness in the later years. A clergyman takes the first step in obtaining social security protection by signing form 2031, available at all social security and Internal Revenue Service offices. The full name of the form is, "Waiver Certificates to Elect Social Security Coverage for Use by Ministers, Certain Members of Religious Orders, and Christian Science Practitioners." He then pays the social security taxes, at the rate set for the self-employed, on his earnings from the ministry.

His religious organization, church, or synagogue is not committed to payments by this decision on his part. He will continue to make these payments as long as his earnings, after expenses, are $400 or more in a year.

"I urge clergymen who have any doubts about their present coverage or questions about coverage for past or for future years to get in touch with their social security office without delay. The time is short. And much may be at stake for clergymen and their dependents," the district manager said.

"About the only clergymen not affected by this elective provision in the law are those who have taken vows of poverty, or those who have earnings of $6,000 or more from another form of endeavor," Mr. Thomas concluded.
