ANDREW WYETH DISPLAY

This is Book Week and we have a real treat for you!

Have you been reading and hearing about the singular honor just bestowed upon Andrew Wyeth by President Nixon? NEWSWEEK, February 23, said: "No other artist has been so honored. Beyond all precedent, Richard Nixon is giving painter Andrew Wyeth a one-man show in the nation's grandest gallery - the White House. To celebrate the event, Nixon is holding a formal banquet in honor of the Wyeths." In your Main Library a Wyeth display shows the large and unusually beautiful new edition of reproductions of Andrew Wyeth's paintings, open to the artist's favorite painting of his wife asleep on the grass, with a basket of just-picked berries by her side.

The people in Wyeth's paintings are of us - they are easily understood Middle Class America. They endure. "Perhaps they recall, to Presidents as well as to ordinary people, the bitter hard work that went into making a nation."

The book is very large and very handsome. We hope you will not miss seeing it. From time to time pages will be turned, giving you an opportunity to see other reproductions of Wyeth's well-loved paintings.
