Travis Found Cure By Adding Honey

By BONNIE CHURCH

Mr. Gordon L. Travis of Cooleemee has a theory that the common honeybee may be superior to man regardless of the intellectual and scientific advancement known to our present time of life.

And he says so.

Unlike man who is always searching and reaching out for the unknown, or the moon, the honeybee takes from the obvious. The known and often overlooked gift from nature and the hand of God.

The flower.

Mr. Travis also believes that the honeybee is still superior in it's ability to return more than it has taken. Utilized and purified.

Honey.

Honey which contains minerals and other materials needed by the body. And honey which is used as one of the main ingredients in the Cool-ee-mee salve which Mr. Travis invented, manufacturers and sells to a small clientele. And which may also be purchased at several local drugstores.

Mr. Travis and his wife came to Cooleemee 13 years ago due to the illness of Mrs. Travis' mother and stayed. Mr. Travis had for many years been plagued with psoriasis, never able to find anything to relieve him, although he tried many prepared medications. And since necessity is the mother of invention, Mr. Travis decided to experiment with different ingredients purchased from over the counter at the drug store. Combining them. And consulting an old 1788 medical dictionary. He finally added honey to his already helping concoction and declares he has never been bothered with psoriasis since.

Thus the Cool-ee-mee Salve was born.

Seven years ago and still being used religiously by many who have heard of the product more or less by word of mouth.

"Cool-ee-mee salve is also good for burns, cuts, poison ivy or any other itching disease," says Mr. Travis. "It's the honey combined with the other ingredients that does the trick."

Incredible; Impossible.

"No," says Mr. Travis.

"Try it and see."
