PARK TRAMMELL INVITES THE REUNION

Florida's Chief Executive Bids
Veterans Welcome

The Proudest Act of His Administration to Welcome the Gray Army
To Florida in May.

Jacksonville, Fla.—Gov. Park Trammell, Florida's popular and accomplished chief executive, has given out a letter for publication in the newspapers of the South, on the approaching reunion in this city, May 6, 7, 8, of the United Confederate Veterans' Association. He assures the Confederate veterans and their friends that they will be given a generous welcome in Jacksonville and at other points in the state which they may visit during their stay in Florida. The governor's letter is as follows:

The Governor's Welcome.
It is simple truth to affirm that the hearts of the people of Florida are overflowing with gratification and pride over the fact that the revered heroes composing the United Confederate Veterans will hold their annual reunion this year in our state's metropolis.
The grand old heroes of the Gray will meet a magnificent, whole-souled reception in Jacksonville and at any other Florida points they may visit. They will be among their own. They will be in an atmosphere thoroughly Southern, splendidly hospitable and highly appreciative of the honor of having been selected as the Reunion City and State.
Florida is rich in romance and tradition, and in the loyalty of her people to high ideals and patriotic endeavors. In proportion to population and resources, Florida contributed as generously and as cheerfully in men and in means to the support of the Confederate cause as did any of the other great commonwealths which so nobly championed that righteous struggle. Florida gave many great names to the mighty galaxy of the South's match-

FOR THOSE WHO PLAY CARDS

Some Hints to Remember by Parties
Who Would Care to Come Desirable Partners.

Here are some of the don'ts for card players:
Don't criticize your partner's play. If she wants you to teach her, tell her what is wrong with her play. If you are fortunate enough to be able to find out—but do it in a pleasant way. Never criticize her play unless you are her teacher. A certain amount of "hashing over" the play is permissible, often pleasant and helpful, after the hand has been played. But criticism is never pleasant.
Don't play for prizes. If you say, don't let your partner know that you are eager to win, and you cannot help being so. A prize opposite you will be distributed.

prize from someone who cares especially about winning. Playing to win, even when there is no prize, is just as bad. It is delightful to win, of course, and it is a truly sportsmanlike spirit that makes one want to win. But remember that a thorough sportsman accepts defeat with good grace—especially if the defeat was caused by some other person's play.

Don't be inattentive. It is almost as bad to be the one frivolous player at a table as it is to be the one serious player. If the other players want to take the game seriously, do your best to play well, or at least to play without interrupting the course of the game with unimportant and distracting conversation.

Don't decry card playing while you are at a card party. If you believe that women waste time playing cards, refuse to go to card parties; don't go to them and then criticize them.

Vera Cruz, the principal seaport of Mexico, off which the United States fleet now lies, has figured often and disastrously in Mexican history. The town itself marks the spot where the Spanish conqueror Cortes landed on Good Friday, 1619, and the old citadel of San Juan de Ulloa has three times within the past century been compelled to yield to a foreign invader—to the French in 1838, to the United States general, Scott, in 1847, and to the French again in 1862. Vera Cruz is a well-built and picturesque town, but its history and the ravages of yellow fever have gained it the sinister nickname "The City of the Dead."

FORMING HABIT OF HEALTH

Infancy is the Time When This Most Important Matter Should Be Attended To.

There is no time when the habit of good health can be more easily formed, and no other period when illness is so easily contracted and meets with so little bodily resistance as during infancy and early childhood.

Babies should be naturally like healthy little animals; if they are not, it is because of wrong living on the part of their parents, resulting in inherited low vitality; or wrong environment due to ignorance or neglect of right health methods.

The well baby needs simple guidance to see that he keeps well; the sick baby needs, and usually gets, attention in the effort to make him well; but the merely delicate baby, to disease and of constant low vitality, needs both guidance and the best attention that medical science affords.

The basis of all modern medicine is prevention of disease. To keep the baby well is far easier, safer and surer than to cure him after he has once become ill.

It takes very little to cause illness in the baby, and the result is often seemingly out of all proportion to the cause.

The same digestive disturbances that, in an adult, would cause at the most a passing discomfort will result in acute illness in the baby, often with the most disastrous effect, and the infection which passes the adult by finds a quick victim in the baby.

FATE THE SCAPEGOAT.

"Rogers is always grumbling against fate."
"Yes, he has to blame his incompetency on something."

THE OUTLOOK.

"Do you think the women will take kindly to the new fashion of green and purple hair?"
"Oh, they'll be just dying for it!"

A BAD ASSOCIATE.

"What's your friend, John?"
"He's a criminal lawyer, dear."
"Dear me, John, I never dreamed you associated with criminals."

"Is that boy of yours learning to play the piano?"
"I hope he is. But from the way it sounds I don't think so."

JACKSONVILLE AND THE REUNION

Veterans Will Find a Modern,
Progressive City

Many Points of Historic Interest To
Be Visited By Survivors of Gray
Army During Week.

Jacksonville, Fla.—When the Confederate veterans and their friends assemble here for their 24th annual reunion, they will be introduced to a city and community, proud of the present and loyal to the ideals of the old South. Making Jacksonville the hub of a wheel twenty-five miles in diameter, a territory is covered rich in historic associations and interest and at the same time a fit exponent of all that is progressive in the Southern States. Jacksonville is a city of 85,000 population, with handsome business blocks, modern skyscrapers, commodious hotels and residence sections that compare favorably with the best in the country. The city's business has grown into large proportions, embracing every line known to a modern city. Jacksonville of to-day is in all respects a thriving center of trade and commerce, much of its commerce going across the seas into foreign countries on ocean steamships. Its transportation facilities are superb, both by rail and water. Railroads feeding the great Florida Peninsula center here. Thousands of tourists and uncounted tons of freight pass through the city and port every year, the one hunting health and pleasure, the other scattering out over the civilized world to do its part in supplying the demands of the consumers of the earth.

And while the visitors are enjoying this view and prospect of modern business and community thrift, they will be given an opportunity to look down the past three hundred and fifty years. All of this territory was in dispute three and a half centuries ago between the French and Spanish, with the wild Indian holding the balance of power between the combatants. The Frenchman and the Spaniard both laid claim to the Florida territory. Which ever which historians differ, but it is well authenticated that the first white men to set foot upon the soil now covered by Jacksonville were Frenchmen under Rene Laudonniere.

The first white man to enter the mouth of the St. Johns river was Jean Ribault, in command of a company of Huguenots, who had left France because of religious persecutions. He made his landing on May 1, 1562, fifty years after the landing of Fonce de Leon at a point to the south of Jacksonville. Some historians are of the opinion that Fonce de Leon sailed as far north as the mouth of the St. Johns, but the weight of evidence is against this opinion. If he were here he left no trace. The evidence is that he did not travel in a direction from his original landing that would have brought him to the vicinity of Jacksonville. It is thoroughly established that Ribault entered the mouth of the St. Johns river May 1, 1562, and sailed up the river some miles to a bluff, where he erected a stone column on which was inscribed the arms of France. But Ribault did not ascend the river as high as Jacksonville. He went from the mouth of the river to Fort Royal, S. C.

In 1564, one year after the departure of Ribault, Rene Laudonniere, who had been with Ribault on the first expedition, came to the mouth of the St. Johns with another colony of Huguenots, and ascended the river as far as the present site of Jacksonville, camping probably on the south side of the river on territory now covered by South Jacksonville. These were the first white men to penetrate the country above the mouth of the river. In honor of the day of discovery, May 1, Ribault gave the river the name of May, and this stood until the Spaniards shipped out the French, some years later. The Spaniards called it the River San Mateo at first, but later changed its name to San Juan. From this it finally became the St. Johns. Old Fort Caroline was situated at St. John's bluff some miles below the city of Jacksonville. No sign of this historic fort remains, not even a slab to commemorate its mournful story.

During the reunion, steamboat excursions will be run to all these points of historic interest on the St. Johns river. It is but twenty-seven miles from Jacksonville to the mouth of the St. Johns, where the government has constructed, with the aid of Jacksonville, and the State of Florida, a system of jetties, deepened the water on the bar and otherwise protected navigation. In passing between Jacksonville and the jetties, the visitor will have no trouble locating the sites of old forts that were erected nearly four hundred years ago by the French and Spanish. The trip is one of the most delightful in the Southern States.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure ever known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.
