LIFE SKETCH OF E. A. MOYE, SR.

Mr. Editor:—I closed last week very abruptly by saying that E. A. Moye was defeated for the Senate by Jacob McCarter, a very worthy citizen of Grifton.

I shall go back a little and tell of his domestic life. He was married in 1867 to Miss Mary Edwards of Lenoir county, and I wish to say that few men have a more industrial wife or a more economical one than she was. She was an especially nice housekeeper and seemed to love to sweep the floor. She was never very healthy and was unfortunate in bringing up her children, as she lost three as fine boys as the writer ever saw. Mr. Moye and his wife joined Corinth church, which was situated near their home and as long as they lived on the farm she always prepared a nice dinner on Third Sunday, and every one attending services on that day was invited to take dinner with them. Mr. and Mrs. Moye were a hospitable couple, and their home was always open to all who desired to enter.

them to have a dinner. He treated the other with utmost respect and courtesy. They were fond of each other and each other's children. Three more honest, honorable, upright, christian gentlemen would be indeed hard to find; each one was the soul of honor—absolutely truthful and remarkably just. Their father having joined is his old age the Sons of Temperance, each one of these men were sober, in fact for the greater part of their lives tee totalers. They were public spirited men and for the most part and in most things they were in advance of the community in which they lived. This was partly attributed to love for reading. When the Dorch Prohibition Bill was up before the people E. A. Moye, though a politician and a great majority of his party was anti-prohibition, he voted for the Bill, and to the dismay of many, he never lost by the vote. People like a brave and courageous man, even when he disagrees with them. He was a remarkable man, for making and keeping friends. He was not given to saying harsh things of others even when he thought they had wronged him. He in most things set a worthy example and the more the people follow in his lead the happier the country will be.—A. J. M.

"I wonder if there will be an ice famine this season?"
"Now wouldn't that be a queer business to be a freeze-out?"

A COMMON TROUBLE.

"On what grounds did he base his domestic discontent?"
"I think some of them were the coffee grounds."

FISHY.

"What is that fish story he is talking about?"
"From what I heard, it is about the limit."

PARADOXICAL PREDICAMENT.

"This report says that Kuerte is fishy ground?"
"That's odd when he seems to be completely at sea."

WEARERS OF GRAY WILL INVADE FLORIDA
Twenty-fourth Annual Reunion
at Jacksonville

at the reunion... Jacksonville will impress the visitors with all the force of Andrew Jackson, for whom the city was named. In return for valuable services rendered the state in its Indian troubles by Gen. Jackson, the city was named in his honor. From a village of 1,500 population a year after the close of the war, Jacksonville has grown into a modern city of 85,000. There is no more progressive city in the South. It is thoroughly abreast of the times, a throbbing and thriving center of trade and commerce. By reason of its location, its railway facilities, its resources and its enterprise, Jacksonville looms big as the Gateway of Florida and commands the trade of a vast and constantly expanding territory. Thousands of tourists from the northern sections of the country pass through Jacksonville every fall to seek warmth and pleasure along the famed East Coast. All of them stop at Jacksonville, spending a part of their vacation time enjoying the many attractions that the city and community affords. This constant stream of travel has made Jacksonville better and more favorably known than any city on the Atlantic coast. Recognizing the opportunities for profitable business and investments, new citizens are acquired every year—active, progressive young men, with brain and capital, who join in the work of making Jacksonville a worthy product of the 20th century.

Jacksonville is a new city, and yet it is old. If one reads the Antiquities of Florida, he finds that the territory now covered by this marvelous city was fought over nearly four hundred years ago by the sturdy adventurers of the 16th century. The early settlements of the Florida peninsula had their genesis and origin in the religious troubles experienced by the Huguenots under Charles IX, king of France. Jean Ribault headed the first expedition to the new world in 1562 for the purpose of founding a colony. This is now the East Coast of Florida. These adventurers first landed at the mouth of the St. Johns river, some five miles below the present site of Jacksonville. Here they erected a fort and afterwards sailed northward to the 16th century.

During the Confederate reunion steamboat excursions will carry veterans and visitors to these points of historic interest on the beautiful St. Johns river, which bounds the city of Jacksonville on the south. A boat ride on this river is worth coming miles to enjoy. In many respects it is the most wonderful body of water in America. It is a river of sensations, fed by never-failing springs. At points above Jacksonville it reaches a width of five or six miles, and it is doubtful if at any point between Jacksonville and Palatka it is less than a mile wide. The Indians called it Welaka, meaning, in their tongue, "chain of lakes." The St. Johns is navigable for about 200 miles, and palatial steamers make regular trips from Jacksonville to the head of navigation. The largest ocean-going vessels come to Jacksonville with passengers and freight from all parts of the world. The traffic that this river brings to Jacksonville is an important factor in its business, and the river itself is a wonderful and delightful revelation to the tourist.

While Jacksonville has not advertised itself as a large manufacturing city, of recent years many large industrial plants have been established, giving employment to 5,000 wage-earners and turning out $14,000,000 to $15,000,000 worth of products per annum. In variety of products, the city makes a showing that but few other communities can equal. New industries are secured almost every month, and the Board of Trade, one of the most active in the South, is steadily pushing a campaign for more industrial establishments.

WRITTEN BY A SINGLE WOMAN, PROBABLY.

Man in his arrogance rises up ever and anon to harangue on the vanity and foolishness of woman's dress. Well, let him. Who cares, anyway? asks a writer in one of our exchanges. Certainly not the woman for she goes on her way serene and smiling knowing in the depths of her wily little heart that it is the very conceits he condemns that take his eye and ensnare his fancy. Woman without her frills and furbelows would be a sorrow sight indeed, and man, the sinner, would be the first to tell her so. Man's dress, I must admit, is in general very sensible, but there is one thing about it that for unless discounts anything that women ever wore or thought of. I am referring to that little flap that is placed just below the bosom of the shirt and which is supplied with a button-hole, but for what reason nobody has ever been able to discover. It seems to me that to be consistent man should remove that flap before he makes any criticism on the apparel of his better half, and I am sure women in the land agrees with me.—Ex.
