Published by the Rouse Printery

Entered in the Post Office at Farmville, N. C., as second class mail matter.

FRIDAY MAR. 10, 1922.

That the Eastern Carolina chamber of commerce is destined to play an important part in the industrial and commercial development of the thirty-nine counties in this part of the state is quite evident, and it is up to the public to do whatever it can to support the institution. The resources of these counties are unbounded, and by proper advertisement and development, will be made of far greater value than ever before. This institution embraces the strength of every chamber of commerce in every town and city of the thirty add counties involved, and this is evidence enough that it has sufficient influence to accomplish great things. The officers, at least the head officers, of the organization reside in Greenville, and it is up to Pitt county people to support them in every way possible.

The boll weevil may not sound serious to the farmer who has never had any experience with him, but to those who saw thousands of pounds of cotton go to ruin under Mr. Weevil's damaging touch his coming has great significance. The grower shouldn't be misled by persons claiming to fully understand the situation and advising them to plant usual acreage. Conditions demand reduced crops of all kind, except food and unless this is in evidence at the end of the season no one can tell what the outcome of the season will be.

Colds & Headache

"For years we have used Black-Draught in our family, and I have never found any medicine that could take its place," writes Mr. H. A. Stacy, of Bradyville, Tenn. Mr. Stacy, who is a Rutherford County farmer, recommends Black-Draught as a medicine that should be kept in every household for use in the prompt treatment of many little ills to prevent them from developing into serious troubles.

THEDFORD'S BLACK-DRAUGHT

"It touches the liver and does the work," Mr. Stacy declared. "It is one of the best medicines I ever saw for a cold and headache. I don't know what we would do in our family if it wasn't for Black-Draught. It has saved us many dollars. I don't see how any family can hardly go without it. I know it is a reliable and splendid medicine to keep in the house. I recommend Black-Draught highly and am never without it."

REWARD OFFERED.

It will be easier to accumulate money if you have some worth while objects in view, and always fix the date when you mean to pass the next hundred dollar mark. We know of the self denial of many who at last have obtained their reward, and can witness the fact that their present resources are due to pluck—not luck; and to a bank account—not a pull.

Everyday brings opportunity to reward the man who has ready money.
