

Music Welds Community Together

"MUST be a band concert here tonight." That's the conclusion to be reached in driving through a town where every street is lined with parked cars and streams of machines are pouring in from all directions. That the stirring strains of the fiddle, fife and drum are inevitable agents in getting communities together is attested by the fact that no fewer than 23 of our 48 states have enacted band laws which permit the levying of a small tax for the support of a municipal band.

This flourishing situation is brought to light by a survey made by the Coon Music Center in which the progressive states were found to be: Alabama, California, Colorado, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Montana, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, South Dakota, Texas, Utah, Vermont, West Virginia, South Carolina, North Carolina and Wisconsin. Similar legislation is pending in Arizona, Florida, Idaho, Kentucky and New Mexico. The amount of the tax to be levied depend on the size of the town. They usually range from one-half mill to two mills per dollar of assessed valuation. The pioneer state in this movement was Iowa and many of the states in other states are based on the Iowa band law. This provides that the tax may be levied only after a certain percentage of qualified voters have petitioned to bring the question to a vote and a favorable balloting has been made. The tax may be repealed in the same way.

What Young America Likes in Music

WHAT are the musical preferences of young America? According to their own statements, 1,746 high school boys and girls of Denver, Colorado, know exactly the sort of music they like best and were not slow to make their preferences known to J. C. Kendall, director of music in the Denver public schools. Orchestra music was selected by 27 per cent of these as affording the greatest pleasure, while youthful thumbs turned up for band music to the tune of 20 per cent.

To an equal number of students, music spelt dance music, either direct, "canned" or via radio. While this is usually orchestra music under another name, their choice gives some idea of the type of composition which this fifth prefers.

Instrumental music, either as soloists or trios, as differentiated from large bands and orchestras, received 19 per cent or almost another fifth in the musical balloting, while vocal music makes the least appeal and was the selection of the remaining 14 per cent.

The other is that 3,292 musical instruments were brought to light in the families of these pupils and that in over 60 homes a definite musical organization was flourishing, such as trio, quartet or even small band. An 11-piece orchestra was mentioned in one home as the band which keeps the family round the hearth at night.

A Dentist pulled a young man's tooth. A pin was in the chair. He felt this, and cried, "Oh, Doc, Do the roots go down to there?"

"By cracky! Here I be ninety-nine years old today and never have used glasses," proudly boasted old Mr. Jenkins. "Yes, sir, I've always preferred to drink from a bottle," added the aged gentleman.
