SPECIAL SESSION FUNDS FOR FARMERS BUDGET INTERFERENCE WALLACE'S PROGRAM

(Hugo S. Sims, Washington Correspondent.)

While President Roosevelt would make no statement last week as to a special session of Congress, the general idea was that during this week, the President will decide to issue the call for a special session to convene early in November.

The purpose of the session will be to get an early start on farm legislation. It is feared that if this is not done before the January term, it will almost be impossible to line up the details before farmers in some sections of the country begin their spring planting.

Generally, it seems to be taken for granted that the present Soil Conservation program, with benefit payments, will be continued. There is quite a drive being made for some additional payments to be provided for the farmers. Whether the funds for these additional bounties will come from a processing tax or from collections on imports, under the tariff, is uncertain. In the case of cotton, Secretary Wallace seems inclined to the processing tax idea but in some quarters there is an effort underway to secure additional funds for farmers from the tariff collections.

In this connection, it is well to call attention to the fact that President Roosevelt has practically served notice that "he will not stand for another big subsidy" for cotton to be raised by direct appropriation from the Federal Treasury. The reason for the President's position is his insistence on curtailing Federal expenditures in order to bring the budget into balance. Inasmuch as any diversion of money collected as tariff dues will, in effect, come out of the general treasury it would seem that the President practically limits the source of bounties to processing taxes.

Secretary Wallace, speaking at Memphis, Tennessee, urged farmers of the South and West to maintain their solidarity. The Secretary of Agriculture stressed the need of mutual understanding between these sections in order that the "united agricultural front" might be maintained. He also pointed out that this is all the more necessary because opponents of Federal aid to farmers have already launched a determined fight against contemplated legislation intended to carry out the long-range program which the Secretary is sponsoring.

In a subsequent speech, Mr. Wallace gave publicity to a program indorsed last February at a meeting of farm leaders who recognized that any permanent national farm program must be a program of balanced abundance and security for both the farmer and consumer." He said that it was endorsed by the President of the American Farm Bureau Federation, the National Grange, the Farmer's Union, the Farmer's Holiday Association, and the Secretary of the National Cooperative Council. These principles are outlined, as follows:

First—That agriculture has a right to a fair share of the national income.
Second—That consumer as well as farmer interests should be safeguarded through an ever-normal granary.
Third—That conservation of the soil is vitally important to the nation.
Fourth—That farmers ought to be assured of security of tenure of farms they occupy.
Fifth—That farmers' cooperative movements ought to be encouraged.
Sixth—That provisions ought to be included in any national farm program favoring the family-sized farm.

In his speech, Mr. Wallace declared that farmers should get the same share of the national income per capita as they got before the World War.

or a longer period, this gives the same answer, and that answer is that farmers in the United States in the year ending June 30th, 1937, should have received from the sale of crops and livestock about a billion dollars more than they did." Until this comes about, he urged agricultural leaders to work to bring about "such changes in governmental rules of the game as will give the farmers that which they must have in order to make their effective contribution to the welfare of the nation."

He explained that this means to him "parity income" but that if necessary to use "the concept of parity prices," he would favor it but "if the parity price concept means reduced income for farmers and scarcity for consumers, I am in favor of trying to get parity income for farmers by some other device."

Mr. Wallace also urged that payments to farmers from the Treasury be looked upon as the farmers' tariff. "Farmers on the export market have seen the purchasing power for their exports destroyed by the tariff. It is imperative, as long as the people of the United States stand for high tariff, that the farmers on the export market fight for their equivalent in the form of crop or price adjustment payments."

Less Monthly Discomfort

Many women, who formerly suffered from a weak, run-down condition as a result of poor assimilation of food, say they benefited by taking CARDUL, a special medicine for women. They found it helped to increase the appetite and improve digestion, thereby bringing them more strength from their food.

Naturally there is less discomfort at monthly periods when the system has been strengthened and the various functions restored and regulated.

Cardul, praised by thousands of women, is well worth trying. Of course, if not benefited, consult a physician.
