Looking at Washington

Prof. Glenn Frank, former President of the University of Wisconsin, and including a group of two hundred persons representing various sections of the country, submitted a 33,000-word report, after two years of research, suggesting suitable positions to be taken by the Republican National Convention.

The recommendation is not binding, but the report will be considered by the Resolutions Committee in framing the Party platform. Space does not permit anything like a review of the constructive suggestions that featured the report, which attributed the inability of the New Deal to reduce unemployment to a failure to encourage private enterprise, which compelled public enterprise of the states to expand to take up the slack.

The Committee wants a twenty per cent. reduction in Government spending, a balanced budget by 1942, reduction of certain taxes, repeal of emergency monetary powers, amendments of the NLRB, repeal of the reciprocal trade agreements act, reduction of relief expenditures with administration divorced "from politics," and centered in state and municipal governments, strengthening of the national defense and improvement of the Social Security Act with possible extension of its provisions to help farm labor and domestic help.

GO TO CHURCH

The chief task involved upon the leaders of Christian forces today is, keeping the spiritual currents going in the lives of church people. It is to be regretted however, that this is necessary, for those who have gone to the altars of the church and taken up themselves personal moral obligations, should become leaders in the cause of righteousness instead of becoming a problem to the church. We are facing the problem today of keeping the church people from losing Christ. This problem is most serious in the lives of those who do not attend church worship. If we would be alive to Christ and His cause, it is imperative that we attend the worship services of our church.

TREES
Ninety Yancy County farmers have placed applications for 264,750 forest tree seedlings to be planted this spring, according to R. H. Crouse, farm agent of the State College Extension Service.

HIGH STANDARD FOR THE FEW

The people of the United States, we suspect, desire reasonable prosperity and would willingly adopt the methods that seem certain to sustain it.

Consequently, we have been interested in economic problems connected with national well-being. Naturally, we have read much of the industrial production that "raised the American standards of living to a level which made those standards the envy of every other nation."

The question in our minds has been whether that standard of living has been available to all the people of the United States rather than a proud possession of a favored group of industrial workers. Plainly, among our agricultural population no such standard has existed at any time, even in the periods of our vaunted national prosperity.

FARM PROSPERITY NECESSARY

There are many people in the United States who, without knowing the facts, jump to the conclusion that because the income of agriculture has been increased by approximately eight per cent. in the past seven years, there is no necessity for further steps to improve the financial condition of agriculture in this country.

The basic fundamental fact in connection with the farm problem is succinctly stated by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, who recently told the House Committee on Agriculture that while agriculture has approximately twenty-four per cent. of the population of this country and thirty-one per cent. of our children, it receives only about eleven per cent. of the national income.

Realization of the full import of these figures should convince anyone that the plight of agriculture represents a serious economic disorder in the United States but that the social implications are fraught with more danger to the stability of the country.

It is quite true that the prices for cotton, wheat, corn, hogs and other farm products have increased encouragingly from the low prices of the depression, but it should not be forgotten that these prices have been secured, in part, by curtailed production of the national farm plant. Until farmers of the nation can secure fair prices for the full productive capacity of American agriculture, the farm problem will continue to plague the nation.

Of course, there are sleek, well-fed gentlemen who see nothing wrong in the fact that twenty-four per cent. of the people of this country, engaged in farming, received only eleven per cent. of the national income. So far as the prosperous critics are concerned, it makes little difference to them whether the agriculture portion of our population continues to live in virtual serfdom.

What these short-sighted individuals fail to realize is that low farm income creates a serious imbalance in the economic life of the nation and absolutely limits the exchange of products between industry and agriculture. Apparently, they do not believe the studies published in The Country Gentleman, which show definitely that annual factory payrolls cannot rise above total farm incomes, or other authoritative studies which show that factory output is equally governed by farm income.

In other words, the general welfare of the United States, including all of its people, requires that agriculture receive a larger proportion of the national income. When the problem is approached from this angle by business men who appreciate what it will mean to them and their business, we will have less criticism of the efforts being made to augment the income of agriculture.

PAYMENTS

The U. S. Department of Agriculture will begin distributing $225,000,000 in parity payments within a few weeks to producers of wheat, cotton, corn and rice who cooperate in the AAA program.

Recent reports indicate that the use of the best available fertilizer is essential to the production of high yields of crops. The use of natural Chilean Nitrate of Soda is the best available fertilizer for the production of high yields of crops.

The natural way to fertilize crops—for better yield and better quality—is to use Natural Chilean Nitrate of Soda. It's the world's only natural nitrate. Plenty of quick-acting nitrogen and a natural balance of protective plant-food elements to give you healthier plants, more fertile soil.
