

Washington Notes

GARNER
Washington continues to speculate as to the course of Vice President Garner who did not vote in the last election and has been in Washington but very little since July.

HOLIDAYS
Something new, it seems, occurred in Nicaragua after the recent election when President Fomosa decreed two national holidays to celebrate Mr. Roosevelt's re-election and to demonstrate for democracy.

SHIPPING
While accurate figures are not available as to the merchant ships lost by Great Britain since the war started, there is some concern lest the British find themselves short of ocean-going tonnage. With longer hauls and the delays connected with the convoy system, experts foresee a possibility that the German U-boat campaign may cause trouble.

BASES
Latin American countries are reported to have agreed to permit the use of air and naval bases for hemispheric defense. The bases will not be leased by this country but will be prepared and manned by the Latin American nations. The United States it is said has advised the republics that they can use the bases recently obtained by this country from Great Britain.

LABOR
Peace between the American Federation of Labor and the Congress for Industrial Organization depends largely upon what the C. I. O. does at its convention this week. If John L. Lewis is replaced, it is quite probable that the two organizations will be able to get together.

ENGINES
While no one seems to know exactly how many airplane engines are being built in this country, it is said that less than 2,000 motors for fighting planes are being built each month. Engine-building is one of the tightest bottle-necks handicapping the rearmament program.

TAXES
Secretary Morgenthau hopes that Congress will take steps to make all future bond issues taxable. It is estimated that $2,000,000,000 of State and municipal tax exempt securities will mature next year. Incidentally, the Secretary of the Treasury wants the debit limit raised from its present $49,000,000,000 to $60,000,000,000, or more, in order to facilitate defense financing.

STATEHOOD
The Hawaiian people voted 39,413 to 19,911 in favor of statehood.

TIN
Contracts have been signed with tin-ore producers in Bolivia for the purchase of ores and concentrates to produce 18,000 tons of fine tin in a year for the next five years, according to Jesse H. Jones. The RFC will arrange for the construction of a smelter in this country.

PACIFIC BASES
Reports from London, that the United States, Britain and Australia have agreed on defense cooperation in the Pacific, including the use of bases, is unconfirmed in this country as this was written. The general idea is that without any formal commitment, an understanding may have been reached making Singapore and Australian bases and facilities available to the United States fleet under certain circumstances.

THE LAST
Early this month nine over-age destroyers departed for Canada, marking, it is believed, the completion of the transfer of the fifty destroyers provided for in the agreement with Great Britain in September.

FIFTY-FIFTY
Deliveries of airplanes and war materials needed both by Great Britain and the United States will be divided, generally, on a fifty-fifty basis, according to a statement made by President Roosevelt. Hereafter, it is estimated, Great Britain has received about forty-five per cent of production.

Looking at Washington

strong enough to control the course of Republican members of Congress. For example, he recommends taxes to approach the pay-as-you-go plan, but it will remain for the Republican congressmen to implement this principle, if the Administration does not, by proposing specific taxes and voting for them. It will not be enough for the minority party to espouse general principles without offering specific application of these principles to existing situations.

In this connection, Americans might as well realize that both the Republican and Democratic parties are seriously divided by factional differences. Each party has what might be called a Liberal and a Conservative group. Nor should it be overlooked that in the recent presidential election, the people were asked to choose between two Liberal candidates.

Mr. Willkie's acceptance of most of the New Deal legislation, in principle, removed them as campaign issues, but this should not cause us to lose sight of the fact that there exists, in Congress, and throughout the nation, a large bloc of Conservative strength. Whether Conservative Democrats and Conservative Republicans get together for a presidential campaign or not, the Conservatives in Congress will often cooperate by their votes, even if they belong to different parties.

For years, political observers have been predicting a realignment of political strength in this country based largely upon the belief that a Liberal leader will attract Liberals in both parties and that, naturally, an opposition Conservative will attract the support of Conservatives. This process made little, if any, progress during the recent presidential campaign, although there were some signs that Conservative Democrats withheld their support from President Roosevelt.

The course of the campaign, especially Mr. Willkie's declaration for certain "national policies," resulted in a triumph for much of the liberal legislation of the Roosevelt Administration. The re-election of the President, however, is to be correctly judged as a personal tribute to him.

While his tremendous majorities of 1932 and 1936 are things of the past, Mr. Roosevelt exhibited a wide appeal to the entire nation and by a handsome lead. His victory in the face of the anti-Third Term tradition attested the personal hold that he has upon the affections of the people but it by no means represents the permanent strength of the Democratic Party as a Party.

The President had many factors against him, in addition to the Third Term issue. His party organization was disrupted by the defection of Jim Farley, his labor support of John L. Lewis, Conservative Democrats openly opposed him, the Conservation Bill in peace-time was hardly a political asset and his forceful statements of his views about the totalitarian governments tended to take away from his supporters of German and Italian descent. In the face of these handicaps, he conducted a shrewd campaign but, nevertheless, won a decisive victory.

To some extent, the campaign of 1936, with the issue being the President and voters being for him or against him, Mr. Willkie was the beneficiary of the opposition, antagonism and dislike for the President. Included in the Willkie supporters were many diverse elements of opposition, combined in a determination to unseat the President.

The political task, which now confronts Mr. Willkie and to which he has addressed himself in the effective welding of this opposition into a coherent party of principles. To be effective and become a strong political force, the opposition must be cemented by something stronger than the "partisan error of opposing things just for the sake of opposition, which Mr. Willkie decries.

Consequently, it will be interesting to watch the development of the effect to coalesce opposition elements into a unified and harmonious aggregation.

Chicks Need Heated Water During Winter

An egg is 70 percent water!
That is a fact that C. F. Parrish, Extension poultryman of N. C. State College, constantly impresses upon poultry raisers in urging that they provide their flocks with plenty of clean water in convenient fountains. Now, with the approach of winter, Parrish adds this suggestion:

"Arrange for some heated water fountain for the flock to use when cold weather arrives. Water consumption is greater when the chill is taken off, and the more water a hen drinks, the more and the larger her eggs."

The specialist also warns that drafts through openings in the back and ends of the laying house should be eliminated by closing such openings. "Winter is the time to make money from egg production, when the supply is short," he says. "There is a surplus of eggs in the State only during about six weeks in the spring. That leaves about 46 other weeks in the year that our homes and home markets are not amply supplied with quality eggs."

"By selecting chicks of good breeding, and by proper housing and feeding, the farm flock can be managed so as to produce eggs every month in the year. The great need is for summer and fall eggs. If the flock is hatched early in the summer, more care is necessary to prevent partial or complete molt in the fall. However, this can be done quite successfully by the use of wet mash and lights on the laying flock."

"Plan now to produce eggs during the 'other' 46 weeks in the year and to supply broilers and fryers according to the needs of your local market."

It is an open question whether football, as a sport, is worth the casualties.

Vegetable Laxative Has Important Points

Most people want a laxative to do three things: (1) act punctually, (2) act thoroughly, (3) act gently. Here's one that usually fills all three requirements when the easy directions are followed. It's an all-vegetable product whose principal ingredient has medical recognition as an "intestinal-tonic-laxative." That's the ingredient which enables BLACK-DRAUGHT to help you lay bowel muscles. It is the main reason for the satisfying relief from constipation that generally follows next morning when BLACK-DRAUGHT is taken at bedtime. The millions of packages used are proof of its merit.

There are successful businesses that are not run on business principles.
