Children's Missionary Society honors Mothers.

Mrs. J. B. Henson, leader and the Children's Missionary Society of the Methodist Church of Walstonburg, gave a party for their mothers on Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Henson. The guests were greeted at the front door by Alma Gray Beaman and Joyce Rouse. They were shown by Mrs. Henson into the living room where corsages were presented to the mothers. The rooms were decorated with a variety of summer flowers. A very interesting program appropriate to mother's day, was given. Song—"We Welcome You To Our Party." Reading—Mother's Day—Virginia Fields. Prayer. Song—For Mother. Playlet—"A Gift for Mother"—Raymond Bailey, Frances Dixon, Emma Jean Redick, Joyce Rouse, Retha Mae Ellis and Alma Gray Beaman. Song—Mother of Mine. Recitation—"The Program is Over"—Pauline Dixon. The dining table was covered with a lace cloth and in the center was a dark blue venetian bowl filled with yellow snapdragons, iris, daisies and blue ragged robins. On each end of the table was a small bowl of yellow flowers. Mrs. Henson assisted by Ramona Rouse, Virginia Fields, Am Hicks and Janie McKeel served strawberry cream, cake made as yellow May baskets, cookies and green minis. During the social hour music selections were presented by Emma Jean Redick, Ann Hicks, Ramona Rouse and Raymond Bailey. At the close of the party Pauline Dixon, President of the Society in a very pleasing manner presented Mrs. Henson with a lovely table lamp as a token of love and goodwill. The receiver, Mrs. Henson will soon leave to make her home elsewhere.

One Out of Five Depend On Cotton

One out of every five people in North Carolina is employed in the production and manufacture of cotton, says H. W. Taylor, marketing specialist of the N. C. State College Extension Service. That's why this State should place a special significance on National Cotton Week when it is observed the country over May 16-24, he continued. In 1940 the North Carolina cotton crop produced 740,000 bales valued at $95,150,000 and 229,000 tons of cottonseed valued at $7,970,000. According to the 1940 census, cotton was grown on 182,249 of the 278,276 farms in the State. With an average of 5.5 people on every farm, this would mean that 600,000 are engaged either directly or indirectly in the production of cotton. To that may be added the 175,000 who are employed in the manufacture of cotton. The cotton industry is one of the mainstays of the State's economy. It is the way in which the State's surplus is produced.

eastern Chain Store Council. T. B. Upchurch, Jr., of Beaufort, chairman of the North Carolina-Virginia unit of the Cotton Council, has enlisted the support of all farm and home agents and Chambers of Commerce. P. D. May, of LaGrange, State representative of the Chain Store Council, says that dry goods and variety stores, as well as some food chains, are planning to feature cotton goods in their sales and advertising campaigns during the week of May 16-24.

IN MEMORIAM DR. C. C. JOYNER

Friday morning, May 2nd, 1941, the Sheriff of death served or caused to be served upon the body of Dr. Claudius Cameron Joyner, a summons demanding his immediate personal appearance before the Judge of all men to hear the verdict, "well done, thy good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joys of the Lord." Since the news of his death spread throughout the community, we see upon the faces of his people evidence of sorrow, because no greater personality ever lived and walked with man. It was a great joy of his life to serve his people, and he poured out unto them the fullness of his heart and the knowledge and wisdom of his experience, and to-day, tomorrow and forever there will linger in the memory of man, this noble character. He was bold, fearless and unafraid; he was loyal to his patients, his friends and unto man; he was obsessed with the full knowledge of man's duty; he knew that the world contained nothing worth the life and consecration of an immortal soul; he withheld nothing that was useful, beneficial and helpful to humanity; he believed it was better to live in the hearts of men than in the annals of state; he believed it was better to die for the world than to live for self; he served the rich and poor alike; he knew no distinction in the service of his people; he served God and his people with a spirit "that it is more blessed to give than to receive." In the quiet hours of the night, when millions of souls were sleeping in sweet sleep's embrace, Dr. Joyner traveled along and over the highways and by-roads of this community to reach the bedside of some suffering soul and there administered unto suffering humanity without reward or hope of reward. And as the hours of yesterday became history of to-day, Dr. Joyner continued laboring and serving his people. He loved life; he knew its value and he knew some day, the end would come, but he feared not, because he knew it was promised, "he that believeth in Me shall not perish but have everlasting life." The voice that, through such a noble life, has whispered words of cheer and encouragement to the sorrowful, is silent; the hand that so patiently and mercifully administered unto the weak and suffering, is folded in death's embrace, but the life itself and the memory of his deeds will live forever, and we find comfort, even in the hours of darkness and distress, in studying the life and character of such a noble personality. While he was with us, we could see his deeds, but now we visualize his many cardinal virtues and walk in the memory of him whose wisdom merits man's highest praise. As we stood with bowed heads and bleeding hearts, witnessing the return of the body unto the bosom of the dust, we could hear in a far distance—"God giveth and God taketh away, blessed be the name of the Lord," and "whosoever liveth and believeth in Me, shall never die." To-day, his lifeless bones rest beneath a wilderness of roses, in recognition of his love, courage, loyalty and patriotism and may the memories of this man cling with everlasting reverence and abide in the hearts of his fellows. Dead, yet he lives. R. T. Martin.

keeps the German fighting. The production of military aircraft in the United States during the month of April was 1,247 planes, representing an increase of seven-tenths per cent over December. It is expected total production of military craft in this country this year will reach 20,000 instead of 15,000 as hitherto assumed. It may be interesting to compare the April output with production for former months, which follows: March, 1,216; February, 972; January, 1,036; December, 790. While complete figures are not available to reveal the percentage of trainers and combat planes in the April total, it is reasonably certain that the proportion of combat planes has been steadily increasing in recent months. In February, out of 972 planes, 418 were trainers, 23 were commercial airline ships and 65 were other types. This leaves 484 combat ships for February. In announcing the April plane production figures, the Office of Production Management gave no details. It is impossible to say what percentage of the planes were delivered to the British or other foreign countries. Some ideas may be obtained from a Commerce Department report on Aeronautical Exports, during the first quarter of 1941, however. In March 451 land planes were exported, with the British Empire and Egypt receiving 414. This compares with 258 in February. Generally, the tempo of plane deliveries is being steadily accelerated. This includes airplane engines, as well.
