Mrs. Jack Spelling, chairman of the Art Department, introduced Mrs. Herbert Hart, of Farmville, speaker for the afternoon.

BIRD CLUB

Yellow-billed Tropic Bird was the subject studied at Saturday Bird Club meeting.

Imagine to yourself a beautiful Dove with two central tail-feathers sweeping out behind to a distance of a foot and a half, and you will have a fairly correct picture of the Tropic Bird.

It is one of the most appealing and graceful of all birds on the sea. The plumage is silky white, with just enough black on the wings and head to emphasize the dazzling glory of the whole effect.

of forty or fifty feet. "Longtail" is one of the names by which sailors know them. They are thirty-two inches long. They inhabit the coasts of Tropical America and the nearby islands.

As only a single egg is laid in a season they will probably cease to graze these waters and one of the island's natural beauties will be gone forever unless a sentiment is rapidly developed for their protection.

One noticeable feature of the Tropic Bird is its inability to walk upright or to stand on its legs.
