At Home On The Farm
— with —
THE CITY COUSIN

"Just how much does it cost a farmer to produce his own meat?" I happened to ask Farm Agent George Hobson, of the State College Extension Service, when I was down in Davie County not long ago.

"Well, Cousin," he says to me, all the time signing letters and stuffing papers around on his desk. "I've got a good story for you on that very subject."

When George's flurry of work came to a halt, he pulled open a drawer and pulled out a sheet of figures.

"Last summer," George began, "pork couldn't be bought at any price, and the meat situation was looking mighty bad for J. C. Jones, manager of the Davie REA, and his line foreman, Joe Patner."

I told George I remembered how bad it was.

"Well," he says, "these men bought five pigs, six weeks old, at $12.50 each, and . . ."

At about this point in the story, a Davie County farmer came to see George and asked him if he could take the time to run out to his farm on a pretty pressing problem, I guess, and George says, sure, and he gives me the sheet of figures on the two REA men, and tells me to bring it back with me and do what I can with it.

So, I understand from what the Agent says that these men are not farmers. They realize, though, that these five pigs have to eat, so they lay in the provisions.

Here's what the board bill looked like when it came in. Fifty bushels corn, $105; 800 pounds fish meal, $24; 400 pounds cotton seed meal, $16; and one block salt, $1.00.

I was beginning to think I was learning more about the diet of pigs than how much home-grown meat cost, but I kept going—adding through the figures.

It seems the two men called on the veterinarian, or the veterinarian called on the pigs, or something, and there was a charge for this of $3.00. And, of course, no statement of costs would be complete without saying that the initial investment in the pigs was already $62.50.

When it came to housing the pigs and building a self feeder, I would probably have been stumped, but not the enterprising manager and line foreman. They rounded up an old steel drum and some scrap lumber, and presto! solved!

Then one of the pigs died. This would have been a terrible blow to me, but the other four pigs did extra well, as if they were trying to make up for the little fellow that didn't make the grade. When they were killed last month, they dressed out at 988 pounds, George's report showed, and with the local market paying thirty-five cents a pound at that time, we can figure that the men had $345.80 worth of pork for their troubles. Can't we?

The total raising expense, $211.50, divided by 988 pounds, gives us 21.4 cents a pound. Therefore, the Jones-Patner pig growing business netted the two men a saving of 13.4 cents a pound on their meat.

And besides, think of the fun they had watching the pigs grow.

Head Off Infections With First Aid Kit

Every North Carolina farmer owes it to himself to provide adequate first aid materials and facilities for the treatment of minor injuries occurring on the farm and in the home that may save a life or prevent serious infection, says Prof. David S. Weaver, head of the Agricultural Engineering Department, State College.

Prof. Weaver suggests that a home-made first aid kit containing the essential medications and drugs may serve just as well as the more costly prepared first aid kits. A tight box, preferably of metal and similar to a small cash box or fishing tackle box will serve as a suitable container for the kit.

Minimum requirements for the kit are: Rolls of adhesive tape of varying widths; sterile cotton, swabs and sticks; sterile white cloth for large bandages and tourniquets; matches; ointment for burns; tincture of iodine; boric acid; tincture of mercuriochrome; tincture of benzoin; liquid green soap; and rubbing alcohol.

The following specific suggestions for treatment are given:

For bruises and scratches and after removal of splinters, apply an antiseptic, then a sterile bandage.

For puncture wounds — deep ulcers or nail punctures — apply tincture of mercuriochrome, bandage wound and go to a doctor.

For small cuts — cleanse skin around the cut with liquid green soap or benzine, then cleanse skin with alcohol and apply an antiseptic to the cut with a clean applicator.

Marines Take Over Morehead Beaches

Morehead City, Jan. 14.—The Marines have landed in Morehead City.

Second division leathernecks from Camp Lejeune have taken over the port terminal here for a week of beachhead operations and several thousand men are expected to be in action.

The terminal property is jammed with ambulances, jeeps, and vehicles marked "explosives."

State College Hints To Farm Homemakers

By Vera Stanton
Assistant State Agent.

Holiday Records To make next Christmas easier, save and file away this year's list of gifts, and add to it any ideas you may want to remember, suggest extension specialists in the U. S. Department of Agriculture. For example, keep a record of any magazine subscriptions sent this year and the date when they expire. Jot down ideas for homemade gifts that may be useful next year, and keep a record of types of wrappings or seals which you found especially useful or attractive this year. Before putting away Christmas cards, bring your address book up to date with new or changed addresses.

Instead of discarding Christmas cards, put them into a scrap book which the youngsters of the family can enjoy the year around, or save them for a shut-in day and let the children paste them in the book.

Many a new year's landscape is blemished by old Christmas trees dumped forlornly in backyards. Foresters of the U. S. D. A. suggest that a few minutes' work with a sharp hatchet can convert the old tree to a neat bundle of kindling for winter hearth fires. Or, the tree can be set into the ground outdoors as a winter shelter and feeding center for birds. Birds will enjoy bits of suet, raisins and bread crusts attached to the branches and will repay the kindness next spring by helping to destroy insect pests and weed seeds around the grounds and gardens.

Oranges and grapefruit are the buys in fresh fruit this winter. Prices of both are lower than in many years, according to U. S. D. A. marketing specialists. Both the orange and grapefruit crops for the 1946-47 season promise to be the largest on record. The orange crop is 20 percent larger than last year and 53 percent above average, while the grapefruit crop is 6 percent larger than last year's big crop and 69 percent above average.

Plan Year's Work With Farm Records

Planning for the year ahead is essential to any form of business. The farming enterprise requires this paper work no less than any other commercial activity in which the operator expects to make a profit.

Dr. R. E. L. Greene and W. H. Pierce, agricultural economists with the N. C. Agricultural Experiment Station, in recommending the keeping of farm records as a means of adequately and accurately planning for the year's activities, explain that there is more to recording the year's work than merely knowing if the farm made a profit or loss.

Intelligent action can be based only on fact, they say. Keeping farm records offers the simplest and most accurate means of achieving this.

Four steps are necessary in keeping a farm record, first of which is to take an inventory of all farm property at the end of the record period. This means recording the number and value of all items of property the farmer owns or owes.

Second step is keeping a record of farm income and expenses. Often, the best means of doing this is to carry a small notebook with one on which can be recorded all transactions as they occur. Later, they can be transferred to the permanent record book.

The third step in keeping farm records is to take an inventory at the end of the record period. This inventory is similar to that taken at the beginning, except that all changes must be taken into account.

Final, and most important step, is to summarize and analyze the records at the end of the record period. In the analysis, an attempt should be made to discover the weak spots in the farm business so that they may be corrected.
