

CONFERENCE ON INFANTILE PARALYSIS
WILL BE HELD IN GOLDSBORO, APRIL 3

In anticipation of possible polio epidemic emergencies, all members of the local chapter of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis have been invited by the Foundation and the State Department of Health to participate in a state-wide preparedness conference at Goldsboro, Thursday, April 3.

J. H. Moore, superintendent of the local school, has been invited to the meeting and is planning to attend.

Announced jointly by Dr. Carl V. Reynolds, State Health Officer, and Philip S. Randolph, of Chapel Hill, the meeting will seek to prepare community leaders and organizations for quick action in case of a polio epidemic.

Participating will be state, county and district health authorities, county medical society officers, school superintendents, city and county welfare personnel, health educators, women's club leaders and officers of National Foundation county chapters.

"We don't want another Hickory," Reynolds and Randolph said. "In that epidemic, everything had to be done from scratch. There was no advance organization and the community was totally unprepared to treat patients on a mass scale and to combat the outbreak."

First of its kind in the history of the state, the conference will be divided into two parts: (1) a general discussion in the morning devoted principally to community problems in epidemic areas and (2) panels in the afternoon devoted to specific problems of National Foundation chapters, of physicians and related professional personnel and of health educators in the schools.

Representing National Foundation headquarters will be Dr. Kenneth Landauer, assistant medical director, who will discuss the Foundation's program, "Epidemic Emergency and Year 'Round Medical Care," and Dr. West J. Altenburg, director of chapters, who will discuss the work of county chapters in epidemics.

Among the other speakers will be: Dr. Carl V. Reynolds, state health officer; Dr. G. M. Cooper, director, State Crippled Children's Service; Col. Charles W. Warren, director, State Department of Vocational Rehabilitation, and Dr. Clyde A. Erwin, state superintendent of public instruction.

Epidemic preparedness, Mr. Randolph pointed out, is the "joint responsibility of state and county health departments, the National Foundation and its county chapters. County chapters, with local health authorities, organize the community for emergency action. The National Foundation recruits professional personnel—physicians, nurses and physical therapists—and sends in iron lungs, "hot pack" machines and other equipment.
