BIRTHDAY GREETINGS

Tuesday marked the passing of another milestone in the life of Miss Annie Perkins, whose Christian character and outstanding work in the educational system have influenced two generations in Farmville and will be felt for years to come.

It was typical of the fine lady that she should make her birthday a day of service, as her life has been. In the morning, she taught Bible school; in the afternoon she attended a church meeting and that evening she was one of the hostesses at a circle meeting.

The author of the following lines is unknown but the motto seems to be the one by which Miss Annie Perkins has patterned her life:

"Count that day lost whose low descending sun,
Views from thy hand no worthy action done."

LETTER

Raleigh, N. C.
May 23, 1947

To the Editor:

The influence of the press on public opinion was again clearly demonstrated during the past year. Our public schools were opened last September by employing hundreds of teachers who were not certified. Many vacancies were not filled then and are not filled today. The public, however, at that time was not aware of this crisis in education.

You and your colleagues set to work. You gave abundant space to true stories concerning the true situation. With editorial pen in hand and coats removed, you joined the crusade and sought to awaken an apathetic public. That you met with some success is evidenced by the legislative action of our recent General Assembly. Without your aggressive support the teachers would have received no more than a 20 per cent increase, if, indeed that much. This letter, therefore, is to thank you for every story you carried and every word you wrote.

We are especially grateful for your assistance while the 1947 Legislature was in session as well as for your continued support now that Federal Aid hearings are being held in Washington. Teachers are deeply indebted to you and to your newspaper.

You know, of course, that the crisis has not ended. We shall be made aware of its continuance when our schools open in September. Thousands of North Carolina boys and girls will again be taught by the unskilled and the untrained. Equality of educational opportunity in our State can only be realized when the local community, the state, and the Federal Government join hands and unite their resources. We shall need your support again, and we know we may count on you to continue the crusade upon which are engaged all those who believe that the schools of today will inevitably determine the social, economic, and political future of tomorrow.

Gratefully yours,
ETHEL PERKINS
Executive Secretary, North Carolina Education Association.

BIRD CLUB

At the Bird club Saturday morning, the story of how the wild birds found in the nation today were saved was related. Long ago it was not considered wicked to rob birds' nests or to slaughter song birds for their beautiful feathers. In nearly every village there was some kind man or woman who knew these things not only were wicked but also foolish.
