THE RIGHT TO STRIKE

(New York Herald Tribune)

Section 13 of the Taft-Hartley Act reads as follows: "Nothing in this Act, except as specifically provided for herein, shall be construed so as to diminish in any way the right to strike, or to affect the limitations or qualifications on that right." All of which sounds like double talk but is really nothing of the kind.

The right to strike, like any other right, constitutional, or traditional, has always been recognized as subject to qualification in protection of other rights. What the law provides specifically on the point is that strikes in breach of contract violation, by a union or an employer, render the aggressor liable to civil damages in the Federal courts, if the victim cares to sue.

The law doesn't say the latter must bring suit. It is merely his privilege, as in the case of other breach of contract or for libel or slander or assault and battery. In other words, the right to strike, as that of free speech, is preserved subject only to the potential curbs which honesty and decency prescribe. It is a little difficult, therefore, to understand all the pother about the matter which seems to be agitating both labor and management. Labor is not obligated under the law to a no-strike clause in a new contract, and management, on the other hand, is free to promise that it won't sue should there be a strike. They can make their own terms; but, assuming that each desires continuous work and production, and where good will and commonsense prevail, they will mutually recognize the right to strike has its limits and those in the law should be respected.

State Ships More Fruits, Vegetables

Shipment of fruits and vegetables from North Carolina totaled the equivalent of 14,917 freight car loads, it was revealed by John Win- This was a sizable increase over the 13,015 carlot equivalents shipped from this state in 1946.

Irish potatoes accounted for more than two-thirds of the total 1946 shipments, said Winfield's report, which was based on U. S. Department of Agriculture figures. The State shipped 10,145 carlot equivalents of Irish potatoes, with Beaufort topping the counties with 1,944 carlots. Tyrrell county was second with 929, and Pasquotank ran a close third with 909 carlots.

Other carlot shipments of North Carolina fruits and vegetables, with 1946 figures listed first, followed by 1945 figures, for the same commodities:

Peaches, 1,771 and 1,766; sweet potatoes, 377 and 592; cabbage, 782 and 780; apples, 52 and 60; beans, 167 and 145; broccoli, three and 11; cantaloups, 52 and 93; cucumbers, 307 and 210; mixed vegetables, 190 and 444; peppers, 186 and 184; tomatoes, 14 and seven; turnips and rutabagas, 20 and four; and watermelons, 779 and 548.

BIRD CLUB NOTES

The road-runner, which lives almost entirely on lizards, was the bird studied at the Bird Club Saturday morning.

Made of sticks and lined with grass, feathers, strips of bark, snake skin and rootlets, the nest is a large coarse structure which is located in thorny bushes, cactus, sage brush or mesquite. Four to six eggs are laid but sometimes there are two to twelve. They are chalky white or pale yellow.

The road-runner is a fast runner and has been known to take great delight in outdistancing a team of horses.

Zeb Whitehurst, who read the article, Bob Smith, Tommy Whitley and Eddie Drake, of Coffeyville, Kan., were guests.

Cookies were passed after the meeting.

BERNICE TURNAGE IS ATTENDING BUSINESS COURSE

Bernice Turnage is attending the special "small business course" which the University of North Carolina is offering at Chapel Hill this summer as one of its training programs. The course began Monday and will extend through next week.

Several outstanding business and professional men will appear on the program.
