BROWNIES

Jane Joyner, troop leader, presided at the Brownies' meeting Wednesday afternoon in the Scout room at the high school. Geneva Braxton and Jean Dall were welcomed as new members. The motto, "Help Other"

The troop was divided into sections with May Turnage Eason heading one side and Mary Lou Moore the other. A paper chart which will be used in assigning certain duties was adopted.

Mrs. Henry Johnson, leader, served orange juice and cookies after the play period.

An impressive candlelight service in which wings were awarded to 10 girls who flew up from the Brownies to the Girl Scouts took place Tuesday afternoon at the high school. Those receiving wings which officially made them members of Troop 4 were: Faye Newborn, Ann Morgan, Jane Russell, Norris Spencer, Theodora Albritton, Clara Bell and Sus Flanagan, Lou Taylor Lewis, Ann Pollard, and Martha Holmes.

The girls entered the darkened room singing the Scout hymn and carrying lighted candles and formed a horseshoe. Johnnie Jane Joyner, Brownie leader, bearing the Brownie flag and Marcia Forbes, attired in her Scout uniform, and carrying the Scout flag preceded the new Scouts.

Mrs. George Farr, leader, awarded the wings which are made of golden yellow embroidery sewed on a dark background. They are to be worn on the right hand side of the uniform opposite the pocket.

A decorated birthday cake bearing one candle signifying the first anniversary of a Brownie troop in Farmville was cut and served by Mrs. Edgar Barrett, assistant leader. Pepsi colas donated by the other assistant leader, Mrs. Mabry Pollard, were passed. Green candles flanked the cake which was used as a centerpiece on the table.

During the business session held prior to the ceremony the troop read the Scout laws, motto and promise; the members learned the salute, sign and the handshake. Janet Harris demonstrated the way the kerchiefs are to be tied. Mary Frances Joyner was named to the Court of Honor and Lillie Little was welcomed as a new member.

STATE WELFARE BOARD

the larger hospitals of the State which does outstanding orthopedic work. It was discovered that he had refused an operation recommended by the orthopedists although treatment would have been provided without cost to him.

Earlier this year a group of six crippled salesmen with their manager worked Raleigh and its vicinity with the same type of appeal, asking the subscriber to buy the magazine in order to help the crippled salesman to finance an operation. With one exception, these men gave the New York City address of the firm they represented when registering at a Raleigh hotel. It was found that one of the group was a minor and was serving the company as a salesman in violation of the North Carolina child labor law.

For several years a Chicago firm worked the western counties of the State each fall with a corps of crippled salesmen. At one time the sales manager attempted to employ a crippled boy who was under care at a children's institution. Following his frank statement to the institution's superintendent that he made a business of employing crippled salesmen and that the wages offered were far below standard, the manager was indignantly refused and reported to the State Board of Public Welfare.

The same Chicago organization reported by a superintendent of public welfare as having left stranded and uncared for a crippled salesman employed in another state when he became ill in North Carolina.

The State Board of Public Welfare, in administering the law regulating solicitations for charitable purposes, has contacted managers of these magazine subscription firms advising them of the provisions of the North Carolina law and pointing out that the type of sales appeal made by their representative is of a charitable nature. Two firms assured the State Board of Public Welfare that their agents "sign a pledge to solicit subscriptions only on the merit of the magazines," while another wrote that "we do not want any sympathy sales appeal used regardless of the state in which our managers are located."
