State-Duke Game Heads Sports Program

Built around the Southern Conference headline football engagement between Duke and N. C. State, Saturday will be a gala day in Durham. The gridiron clash, expected to be one of the most thrilling in the state this season, is, of course, the main attraction but Durham will be celebrating "Tobaccoland Jubilee" on Saturday with a huge parade in downtown Durham at 10 o'clock in the morning.

Nine bands, composed of 700 musicians, will furnish music for the parade and at game that afternoon will go into a mass formation which will be the largest massed band formation in the history of North Carolina football.

The clash on the gridiron is a season-opening "natural." Football experts of the Southern Conference will watch it above all other games to get a line on what may be expected in the race for the 1947 loop crown.

It also has much carried over from last year's game when State scored a stunning upset 13-7 victory over the Blue Devils to start them on the worst season a Wade-coached team has ever suffered.

Some people have said that the State victory last year was a fluke. Coach Wallace Wade of Duke does not think it was a fluke but he thinks that on that day State was probably the best team in the Southern Conference. At any rate, the Wolfpack is determined to win another and to keep the high place in football they attained last year.

The Blue Devils have the same squarely before them, too. A loss in the opener with State could mean another long, hard year because Duke has on its card this season four other teams which are being ranked among the top 20 in the land in Tennessee, Navy, Georgia Tech and North Carolina.

Duke has certainly pointed for the game just as the State outfit has. Neither is looking to any other game on its schedule.

The chips will be down when the two teams line up opposite each other in Duke stadium Saturday afternoon and the fur is expected to fly.

A crowd of 40,000 is expected for the contest but there are still tickets available. The athletic office has announced that there will be a "high school gate" at the game where high school students will be admitted for 50 cents.
