'EMPLOY THE PHYSICALLY HANDICAPPED WEEK'

President Truman, Governor Cherry and many of the mayors of towns and cities in North Carolina have issued proclamations designating the week of October 5-11 as "National Employ the Physically Handicapped Week," a week during which the North Carolina State Employment Service Division, the Veterans Employment Service, the Vocational Rehabilitation forces, the American Legion and other service and patriotic organizations will seek to find suitable jobs for many of the trained handicapped workers in the State.

"The problem," said Henry E. Kendall, chairman of the Employment Security Commission of North Carolina, "is not keeping the handicapped worker on the job he has, but placing him in a job that will utilize his abilities. Statistics show that the disabled worker's employment stability is much better than that of a normal worker. When selective placement is used, by which he is fitted into a job in which his handicaps will not be handicaps, the handicapped worker is almost certain to stay on that job.

"A disabled worker, especially a veteran, properly placed in the production line or at the right desk, is a sound payroll investment. In the nation today 170,000 disabled veterans and many handicapped non-veterans, who have proven themselves the most production conscious of workers, are unemployed. Practically all of them can be fitted into jobs by our selective placement specialists that will give them the chance they need to become splendid producers and self-supporting and self-respecting citizens.

"By the end of the war many large firms had established sound policies of hiring disabled veterans, with excellent results. They soon discovered that disabled veterans, properly placed, stayed 'on the ball' and stepped up production wherever they worked. Just because the glamor and popular appeal of hiring disabled veterans has worn off is no reason to let them down. Most employers will continue to employ disabled veterans if they are brought to a realization that it is to their advantage to hire them."

Chairman Kendall calls upon all service, civic and patriotic groups to join the Employment Service and the Veterans Employment Service in their efforts to help the employers of the State realize that it is not only a civic duty, but also good business, to employ handicapped workers.

When the temperature is in the high nineties, it's just about impossible to look or feel important.

It's unfair to ask a man if he will be available for an unpleasant task a month hence. What can he say?

Few people are so vague and irresponsible that they forget to eat dinner, even when alone.

I often wonder if men like to work or just pretend they like to work in order to get away from their wives.
